ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Many months of preparation by New Jersey and national Holstein enthusiasts will culminate this coming week at the National Holstein Convention here Sunday through Thursday at the Taj Mahal Hotel and Casino.

An expected 3,000 attendees will have a wide choice of options for immersing themselves in the the diverse culture, history, and agriculture of New Jersey and surrounding areas.

Of course, they will also find plenty of Holstein-related activities, including a national sale Wednesday offering high quality Holsteins from across the continent. The high-selling animal is expected to top $100,000, according to Joe Valen, convention chairman.

About 300 youth from across the country are expected to gather at the convention, where they will participate in a wide range of activities, including Dairy Jeopardy, a speech contest, Dairy Bowl, a beach party, Great Adventure Safari, rodeo, and a national junior meeting. Youth members can also participate in senior meeting and show events.

Valen, longtime New Jersey dairy farmer and New Jersey Holstein-Friesian Association (NJH-FA) member, said he organized the event with the help of an exceptional team.

Dairy One services a total of about 7,400 herds and 650,000 cows in an area that reaches to Michigan in the west, Tennessee to the south, and Maine to the SCHNECKSVILLE (Lehigh Co.) — A Holstein owned by David Kopfer of Just My Luck Holsteins in Berks County was named supreme champion at the Schnecksville Community Fair dairy show Monday evening.

Youth and open exhibitors together displayed five breeds and 77 animals in the show.

Kopfer purchased the 4-year-old champion, Misty-Crest Wade Abby, at the Penn State Classic Sale last fall from D & D Hottenstein, New Albany.

Jill Vail, leadsperson for the supreme champion, brought 10 animals of her own to the show, including two breed champions in the Ayrshire and Brown Swiss competitions. Kopfer and Vail keep their dairy stock on the same farm in Blandon, which also includes Four-K Farms Holsteins owned by David's father Robert Kopfer.

Youth exhibitors showing champions animals included Kara Brendlinger, Kempton, whose 4-year-old Guernsey was named top of the breed, and Suzanne Harwick, another 4-H'er from Kempton who exhibited the champion Jersey, a 3-year-old cow.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH

JUNE 24–30, 2002

FULL STRAWBERRY MOON, JUNE 24

MOLLY PITCHER

June 28 marks the anniversary of the Battle of Monmouth, New Jersey, in 1778, when Mary Ludwig Hays earned the name Molly Pitcher. Her husband served as an artillery man in the conflict. In the severe heat and combat activity, the guns and the soldiers needed water to cool them off. Twenty-one year-old Molly made trip after trip from a nearby spring, responding to the calls of "Molly pitcher!" across the battlefield. Some say that when her husband was fatally wounded, she took up the ramrod and assumed his post for the remainder of the battle. She later remarried in Carlisle, Pennsylvania, where she was buried as Mary Hays McCauly. A cannon and flag mark her grave.

No war without a woman.

OPINION

A Dairy's Contribution

Don Robinson
Lancaster County
Conservation District Administrator

Consider this — the average size dairy farm with 60 cows on 85 acres provides more than 30 million gallons of net contribution to ground water per year above the amount used by the farm. All regulations affecting water use in Pennsylvania need to acknowledge that open farmland is a net contributor to the groundwater supply.

With the value farmland has in the supply of groundwater, we need a policy that protects and supports the continued maintenance of open farmland in Lancaster County and Pennsylvania.

Example: The average 60-cow dairy farm on 85 acres provides more than 30 million gallons of net contribution to groundwater per year.

- One inch of rainfall over an acre of ground equals 27,000 gallons of water.
- Average rainfall in Lancaster County is approximately 42 inches per year, of which 12 to 15 inches infiltrates to the groundwater (good conservation increases infiltration).
- 85-acre farm x 27,000 gallon per acre inch x 15 inches = 34 million gallons of groundwater recharge.
- 60 cows x 40 gallons of water (average consumption per cow) x 365 days = 876,000 gallons consumed by cows per year.
- 60 younger cows x 10 gallons of water (average consumption/younger cow) x 365 days = 219,000 gallons consumed by younger cows per year.
- Household on farm: 150 gallons (average consumption/household/day) x 365 days = 54,750 gallons consumed by a household per year.
- 876,000 gallons + 219,000 gallons + 54,750 gallons = 1,049,750 total consumed gallons of water on farm per year.
- 34,000,000 gallons of groundwater recharge – 1,049,750 gallons of water consumed on farm = 32,850,000 approximate gallons of net contribution to the groundwater supply each year from a 60-cow dairy on 85 acres.

Of course this will vary from year to year, farm to farm, and family to family. But the net effect is that farms provide tremendous groundwater recharge opportunities. Improved conservation practices can greatly reduce runoff and increase the amount of rainfall that infiltrates to recharge the groundwater supply.

If this 85-acre farm was developed into 300 quarter-acre lots with each household using 54,750 gallons, the water usage on that acreage would be more than 16 million gallons per year. That 16 million gallons would go to the sewer treatment plant and then into a stream or river and not recharge the groundwater. In addition, with the roads, driveways, sidewalks, and house-roofs, there would be at least one-third less open area for water infiltration.

Compare that to the 1 million gallons used by the dairy farm with almost 100 percent infiltration area and no sewers and you begin to see the impact our farms have on water supplies.

To Use Presidedress Soil Nitrate Test (PSNT)

Providing the correct amount of nitrogen for corn production is very important. Applying too much nitrogen wastes money and can contribute to ground and surface water contamination.

If the available nitrogen is less than needed by the crop, however, yields will suffer. If the fields in question have a history of manure use, the PSNT is an important tool to determine which fields should be sidedressed with nitrogen and which have enough residual nitrogen. With the high cost of nitrogen fertilizer and the low price of corn, it is especially important to determine how much nitrogen each field needs.

The PSNT was developed to help answer this question. Research has shown if the soil nitrate-N level is above 21 ppm, there is little chance of an economic response to adding additional N to the field. At soil nitrate-N levels below 21 ppm, sidedress nitrogen will be needed to obtain optimum yield.

This test has most value on fields with a significant contribution from organic N sources, such as a history of manure application or use of a forage legume in the crop rotation. This test is not useful on fields where the primary nitrogen source is from fertilizer.

The soil sample should be taken when the corn is 12 inches tall or at least a week before planned sidedressing. Walk the field in a random pattern and take 10-20 cores to a 12-inch depth, if possible. If a 12-inch depth is not possible, then take the samples as deeply as you can. Avoid starter bands and other atypical areas. Because of sampling problems, this test cannot be used on fields that received injected fertilizer or manure.

It is important to dry the sample as quickly as possible. Crush the cores and combine them into one sample per field. Spread and dry the samples in the sun or under a heat lamp in a well-ventilated area. Send the samples to a reputable lab for soil nitrate-N analysis, or use a field test kit for soil nitrate-N to determine the nitrate-N level in the sample.

If the level is 21 ppm or higher, no sidedress N is needed. If the level is less than 21 ppm, use the worksheet in the Agronomy Facts 17 publication entitled "Presidedress Soil Nitrate Test For Corn" to determine the nitrogen rate needed. This publication is available from your county extension office and also on the Internet at http://www.agronomy.psu.edu/Extension/Facts/agfact17.pdf. The worksheet can also be found in the agronomy guide.

To Learn About The Impact Of The Farm Bill On Pennsylvania's Dairies

Ken Bailey, associate professor of dairy markets and policy in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, said he expects the newly signed federal Farm Bill to be "generous" to Pennsylvania's small dairy farmers.

The new Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002 includes a new dairy program called the "National Dairy Market Loss" program.

Bailey said the new program offers help for small dairy farmers who have to cope with volatile milk prices by providing direct federal payments whenever the fluid price of milk in Boston falls below $16.94 per hundredweight (CWT). The program will cover about 88 percent of the milk produced in Pennsylvania.

"Pennsylvania is unique in that we have about 10,000 dairy farms in the state," he said. "Most Pennsylvania farms have fewer than 100 cows, and that's just the kind of farm operations that Congress intended to support with this program. Unlike many Western states, we can expect the bulk of our Pennsylvania dairy producers to receive countercyclical payments on all of their annual milk sales."

The National Dairy Market Loss program works by making a direct payment to farmers in any month when the Class I price of milk in Boston falls below $16.94. The payment rate is equal to 45 percent of the difference between $16.94 and the Boston Class I price. Bailey estimates that the payment rate under the countercyclical program will average 97 cents per CWT for the period December 2001 to September 2002.

"The dairy markets have been weak in recent weeks because of sluggish demand and growth in the milk supply," said Bailey. "That will result in fairly large payment rates under this new program." His analysis indicates that the Boston Class I price was above $16.94 just 28 percent of the time during the 60-month period from January 1997-December 2001.

"The program is retroactive back to December 2001. Therefore, most Pennsylvania dairy producers can expect to receive a fairly substantial check from USDA some time this summer or early fall. This check, which is for the transition period from December 2001 until they get the program running, will be a one-time payment. Thereafter, payments will be computed monthly and will be received by dairy producers no later than 60 days from the previous month."

Payments are limited to the first 2.4 million pounds of milk from a single "dairy operation" in a given federal fiscal year (which ends Sept. 30). That is equivalent to the amount of milk from a 133-cow dairy operation producing 18,000 pounds of milk per cow.

Pennsylvania dairy farmers will receive instructions from USDA in the next month or so to sign up for the program at their local Farm Service Agency office. They also will receive the regulations that spell out exactly how much milk will qualify for the program. The sign-up period should begin no earlier than July 13, 2002. The countercyclical payment program is expected to end Sept. 30, 2005. USDA is still writing the regulations that will determine the definition of a "dairy operation."

Bailey warns that Pennsylvania dairy farmers should consider this program as temporary. "We should take these payments and focus on making our farms more competitive over the next three years," he said. "That way, if the program ends, we'll be better positioned for the future."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

JUSTICE AND JUDGMENT

Background Scripture:
Psalms 72; 82; 113.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 72:11-19.

"When are Americans going to wise up to the fact that lots of poor people are lazy, worthless, and they don't deserve our help?"

It wasn't so much a question as an affirmation. "Put them in decent housing and they will turn it into a pigpen. Put them in a nice neighborhood and they will trash it. Give them jobs and they'll loaf or just not show up. Give them money and they will spend it on booze or drugs."

I walked away quickly and I was sorry I had overheard these remarks, because they were uttered in church!

I suppose that is not so surprising as it once might have been for, over the past 30 years in particular, I have noted a growing mood in our society that encourages people to despise the poor. This has been during a period in our economy when the gap between the rich and the poor has grown alarmingly and during which justice leans heavily in the direction of those who can afford it.

Archibald Rutledge has written about the widow of a black preacher who was always doing something for the poor. He was so impressed by her dedication that he built for her, in his own backyard, an immaculate little house. Shortly after the widow moved in, she invited a most disreputable woman in to visit. The widow's benefactor was irate: "How could you have invited that creature into your pretty new home?" Softly, the widow replied: "Jesus would."

Worthy Of Compassion?

It is your privilege to believe that the poor do or may not deserve our help — but not as a follower of Jesus Christ, for he made it very clear how he regarded the poor and expected us to act toward them. He never taught his disciples to help only those who "deserved" help. Like the great prophets, he understood that God had a very special interest in and compassion for the poor — whether or not they were "worthy."

Jesus taught that the quality of God's judgment would depend upon the quality of our compassion for others: "Depart from me, you cursed, into the eternal fire prepared for the devil and his angels; for I was hungry and you gave me no food, I was thirsty and you gave me no drink, I was a stranger and you did not welcome me, naked and you did not clothe me, and in prison and you did not visit me" (Mt. 25:41-43). Response to the needy, whether deserving or not, is essential, not rituals nor doctrines.

No Exemptions

In Psalm 82 we have a scene that disturbs some readers because it depicts God taking "his place in the midst of the gods" (82:1). But before we become embroiled in the specter of the existence of other gods, let us accept this image as simply an imaginative device used to demonstrate the sole sovereignty of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

In verse 2, the Lord castigates these gods for the injustice they tolerate and promote in the world: "Give justice to the weak and the fatherless; maintain the right of the afflicted and the destitute. Rescue the weak and the needy; deliver them from the hand of the wicked" (82:3,4). In Psalm 113, God is praised because "He raises the poor from the dust, and lifts the needy from the ash heap . . ." (113:7). Nowhere are the "unworthy" needy exempted from the mercy of God.

We are a society that pretty well knows and heeds the values of things, but less and less do we seem to be aware of the value of people who are needy. Thomas Hood once prayed: "Oh God! that bread should be so dear, and flesh and blood so cheap!" Many people take better care of their car or their backyards than they do the needy of their communities where "bread is so dear and flesh and blood so cheap." The other gods, "sons of the Most High" in Psalm 82, "shall die like men" (v. 6). Because they are not just and do not teach justice, they will lose their divinity and "die like men."

And what will be our judgment from the Lord if we ourselves are not just?

Berks County Grazier Maximizes Soil Returns

BETHEL (Berks Co.) — Eleven years ago changes began taking place in the pastures of Papa Farm.

When Brian Mohn began his pasture-based program it was hard to find information on rotational grazing,' he said. "I read Lancaster Farming articles and got ideas that migrated from Lancaster."

Mohn along with his wife, Karen, and daughters Beverly 12, Carolyn 10 and Judy, 8, have managed the farm for 11 years for a Philadelphia businessman.

His investigation into grazing came because of a concern for good usage of the ground. he said "I wanted to get the most out of this moderately productive ground.

A lot of it was trial and error initially," he said. County agents helped in his education by conducting pasture walks and grazier discussions that helped to educate Mohn.

In the initial days I traveled to Lancaster for pasture information to learn about water quality projects, he said. Besides adding stream bank fencing Mohn has put in his own concrete stream crossings.

Now, "to get a profitable operation I don't see any other way you can be in the cow/calf business without being in the grazing business, he said. Because of smaller-framed animals with improved genetics — and carefully-maintained pastures that the animals do not have to be fed supplemental hay or grain, for the most part, the operation's costs have declined.

Pennsylvania Spokesman

A year ago, Mohn went to America's Forage and Grassland Council's conference in Springdale, Arkansas as Pennsylvania's spokesman. Every spokesperson gave a 12 minute presentation on what forages mean to them.

The main audience is university researchers, USDA pasture management people scientists and extension agents," he said. "We were given the opportunity to teach the teachers. They wanted more information to take back to educate others.

There were people from all over the country competing. There were very diverse speeches from graziers, hay producers, and dairy producers."

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Richard Hann knows the history and workings of the Pennsylvania Forage & Grassland Council.

For 34 years, Hann has been a vital part in the organization handling the finances and acting as chief coordinator of events, board meetings and membership matters. He has served as secretary treasurer since 1968. In addition to those responsibilities he assumed a new executive director post in 2000.

Hann recently reflected on PFGC's history along with changes in agriculture and forage management that have occurred through the years.

First formed in 1960 as the Pennsylvania Grassland Council (PGC), the organization became affiliated with American Grassland Council in 1963. The name was changed to Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council in 1978 to more fully recognize its role in the state's forage/livestock industry.

Dr. John Baylor, then a Penn State Extension Forage Specialist was the Council's first president and Charles Wolgemuth general manager of Milton Hershey Farms

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
June 14, 2002
Cheese Prices Fall Below Support

- Blocks fall to $1.13 by mid-week.
- Butter falls below $1/pound.
- Butter/powder tilt less likely.

The price of dairy commodities fell this week because of mounting inventories coupled with weak consumer demand. At the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, block cheese prices fell to $1.13 per pound on Wednesday, June 12. That is officially below the government's support price of $1.1314 per pound for 40-pound cheese blocks.

In addition, the price of Grade AA butter in Chicago fell to $0.99 per pound the same day, still above support levels ($0.8548 per pound for butter).

Weakness in the cash market translated into weakness in the futures markets as September Class III futures fell to $12 per CWT (June 14, 2002). Recall that about two months ago, September Class III futures were trading at $13.50 per CWT.

USDA reported this week that both butter and cheese markets are weak. Current butter production is surpassing demand, and inventories are increasing. Demand for cream for ice cream production is helping, but not enough to prevent inventories from building. The same is also true for the cheese market. Current offerings of cheese exceed orders, and inventories are building.

The market for skim milk powder, or nonfat dry milk, continues to remain at the support price of $0.90 per pound (called the CCC purchase price). Each week the USDA purchases surplus inventory from the market. Recently, the Commodity Credit Corporation, which manages inventory for the dairy price support program, purchased 19.4 million pounds of nonfat dry milk during the week June 10-14. Of the total, 2 million pounds originated from the East Coast, 1.7 million pounds from the Midwest, and 15.7 million pounds were from the West.

For dairy producers, there may be just one good piece of news in all this misery. The lower prices for domestic butter, combined with global powder prices of $0.54 per pound, has made it less likely that USDA will change the "butter-powder" tilt this year.

On May 31, 2001 USDA lowered the CCC purchase price (support price) for nonfat dry milk from $1.0032 per pound to $0.90 per pound. Given a "milk" support price of $9.90 per CWT at 3.67 percent butterfat, USDA had to raise the CCC purchase price of butter from $0.6549 per pound to $0.8548 per pound in order to maintain the support value for manufacturing milk. This essentially describes the butter-powder "tilt."

There has been a lot of gossip this year that the U.S. secretary of agriculture is on the verge of announcing a butter-powder tilt that would lower the support price of nonfat dry milk from the current level of $0.90 per pound. The idea is that this would lower the cost of operating the dairy price support program by lowering purchases of surplus powder. USDA authority for this tilt is maintained in the new Farm Bill, as long as it is reported to the Congress.

The downside of another butter-powder tilt, however, is that it must be combined with an increase in the CCC purchase price of butter. Here is my math, which is computed using the current

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
June 19, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat and corn bids were higher, today, despite the favorable weather forecast this week. Wheat harvest is making progress but talks of poor yields, especially in hard red winter wheat, under pinned bids. Export sales continued to lag behind, limiting gains. Corn bids climbed higher on fund buying and some overnight export interest. Soybean bids dropped slightly lower in reaction to the favorable growing weather forecast this week. Wheat steady to 4 cents higher. Corn 2 cents higher. Sorghum 4 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 3 cents lower.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
June 19, 2002
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.2969-1.3984. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.2970-1.4186 mostly 1.3173-1.3781.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9200-1.0250; Class III - spot prices - .7500-.9600.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 0, Out 32; last week - In 0, Out 63; last year - In 0, Out 70. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 0.

Regional Milk Market Administrators announced the following, April 2002 uniform prices: Northeast $12.63, Mideast $11.63, Southeast $12.89, Florida $14.55, and Western New York (a state order) $11.93 at the base city or county in the orders. (For the Northeast, Mideast, and Western New York orders, statistical uniform prices are reported.)

During May, milk production in the 20 major states totaled 13.05 billion pounds, up 3.2% from May 2001. The following are the May-to-May changes for selected states: Texas [1] .7%, Vermont [2] .6%, Virginia [4] .2%, New York [6] .9%, Pennsylvania - 0.1%, Kentucky -0.6%, and Florida -2.1%.

Milk production is steady to easing lower in the more northern areas and scattered parts of the mid-South, generally lower elsewhere. High temperatures are taking their toll on milk output in Florida and other Southeastern states. Florida's milk supply and needs are in better balance and shipments out of state are falling. In fact, last week's total was revised lower.

Bottled milk sales are pretty much in the "summer mode" now that schools in nearly all states are on summer vacation. Surplus milk diversions are lighter in most areas. The strike at a major candy maker's plants is over and milk intakes are getting back to normal. This is easing the pressure on local manufacturing plants. Some Southeastern balancing plants are now shut and others are operating on weekends or reduced schedules. In the Northeast, surplus milk supplies are lighter and plants are more easily able to clear the milk. Contacts report less distressed milk is being cleared.

The condensed skim market is little changed. Prices are unchanged, but the supply/demand scenario is in better balance. Some suppliers report improved spot sales while others still move only contracted volumes.

The fluid cream market is improving. Supplies are tighter and multiples are increasing. Despite the rising multiples, spot prices are lower following the 8.25-cent drop in last week's average CME butter price. Some suppliers are reportedly scrambling to find a few extra loads to cover their improved sales. Hot weather has given ice cream sales a boost, particularly soft serve. Ice cream makers are stepping up output and many are now at typical summer levels. Bottled cream orders are holding up fairly well, but the berry season is drawing to a close except in the Northeast. Churning activity is lighter.

formula for the federal order Class IV price at 3.67 percent butterfat:

A CCC purchase price of $0.80 per pound for nonfat dry milk will result in a CCC purchase price of $1.05 per pound for butter. A CCC purchase price of $0.70 per pound for nonfat dry milk will result in a CCC butter purchase price of $1.24 per pound.

So here is my logic. Lowering the CCC purchase price of nonfat dry milk through a new tilt will not reduce USDA purchases of surplus powder in the U.S., and it will not encourage additional commercial exports of nonfat dry milk. The global market for nonfat dry milk is like the U.S. market, weak and full to the brim!

The only logical result from a new tilt would be that USDA would have to start purchasing surplus butter from the market. Surely it is more expensive to store butter than it is to store nonfat dry milk! So in the short run, at least through the spring and early summer, a butter-powder tilt would actually increase the cost of operating the dairy price support program.

USDA could consider a new tilt when butter starts getting above $1.20 per pound, but that would not occur until later in the fall, if at all. By then, we'd already be into the fall Congressional elections — and that may not be a good time to potentially lower farm gate milk prices! Now, USDA might think differently than I do, and I could be wrong, but my guess is that a butter-powder tilt is not likely to occur this year.

Great Lakes Forum Hosts Brand Marketing Discussions

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Brand marketing of agricultural products was the focus in a sessopm last week at the Great Lakes Forum on Agriculture hosted by Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and conducted at the Nittany Lion Inn.

Before the brand marketing discussion, Lee Swenson, Farmers Union, addressed agricultural water issues. Following the branding discussion, Claude Lavigne, director, Animal Products, Canada, and Bobby Acord, administrator, USDA-APHIS, gave presentations on animal and plant health topics.

The topic of branding was put forth as forum participants — about 40 attendees from across the Great Lakes region — could weigh the options of using a brand on a regional basis, specifically, branding apples from the Great Lakes region.

John Lord, professor of food marketing at St. Joseph's University, opened the discussion by presenting his ideas about the value of a brand.

John Wells, San Francisco, Calif., was a keynote speaker.

"It's all about communication. A brand means something," he said. "We're not speaking in terms of commodities."

A brand, said Lord, could "define your business as providing a healthful, satisfying eating experience."

A brand is not a label, warned Lord. "A label identifies, but a brand involves values," he said. "A brand is promises we make to the buyer.

"What we really want is customer loyalty. They have an implicit understanding about what they're going to get out of that relationship."

Additionally "there is no point in putting a label on unless you can do something different," he said. "You have to give the consumer a reason to buy the product. A brand is not a panacea. Success requires effective marketing, innovation, quality, and consistency."

A brand for produce, he said, would be a team effort. "If you're going to get that great product in consumers' hands, mouths, and stomachs, it's a team effort from the farm all the way to the table."

Also giving ideas about brand marketing was Jon Wells, owner of Jon Wells Associates, a design, branding, and marketing firm in San Francisco, Calif.

A brand attracts consumers to old favorites but also attracts them to new products. "A brand increases what we're willing to pay for a product we trust," he said. "Shoppers have become brand savvy, brand accepting, and maybe even brand demanding" because the "cornerstone of branding is a promise of quality."

Wells has designed a brand for a vegetable broker, and noted that a brand can promise that the product is "safe, that is supports small farms, that it's fresh and has big taste," as in the case of the brand he designed for the California company.

"What I'm trying to do here is give you a language for what you are already doing," he said.

One example of a brand for produce is the familiar "Chiquita" label, which was introduced in 1944 and began appearing on stickers on bananas in 1963.

The apple industry, which now has a large variety of apples, had begun to place PLU stickers on the apples to help distinguish the different prices and varieties of apples. With the success of the Chiquita brand on bananas, it wasn't long before logos and brands began appearing on the stickers.

Additionally, the "salad revolution" paved the way for branding produce when mixed lettuce began appearing in bags as a value-added product with splashy graphics.

A brand can help create an emotional bond, he said. "When consumers know a region, they become attached to it and the people that grow the products in it," he said. Not only does this help create consumer loyalty in purchasing, but they are more willing to "forgive a misstep" in quality control, should the problem arise.

A brand that covers a specific regional area is also beneficial. With the pooling of a larger amount of growers, dollars are more available to promote the brand and get the product on shelves, according to Wells. Also there are less brand choices for consumers.

"However you give up individual identity and individual control," he said. Also individual quality failure impacts the entire group.

"There is an opportunity for all of you to thrive in an environment of competitive harmony," Wells said.

Following Wells was speaker George Lamont, general manager of a 600-acre fruit farm in Albion, N.Y., and executive director of the New York State Horticultural Society.

Lamont noted the increase of apple production in countries such as China, which produces five times the amount of apples the U.S. produces. With the combination of foreign and domestic challenges to the industry, and the decreasing share of consumer dollars (an apple grower gets 13 percent per dollar of apple product sold), the industry needs to look in new directions.

"The apple boasts functional value," he said. Besides being an attractive fruit, the apple is nutritious and viewed as a symbol of health. Also marketers should also realize the emotional value, the nostalgia, of the apple.

"If we're going to develop a brand, we have to commit it to a functional value. Business as usual is not an option, and it's a great time to look at options," said Lamont.

Tom O'Neill, Apple Marketers Association, Ontario, addressed some of the difficulties of a brand, as he has experienced the launching of an "Orchard Crisp" brand for Ontario apples.

"It's hard to get agriculture entrepreneurs together," he said, but is necessary to get industry representatives "to sit down and say, 'how are we going to move this industry forward.'"

Don Armes, Riveredge Produce Market, [illegible] Michigan, has also had experience with branding. In attempting to brand apples as from Michigan, he said, they experienced "issues of fierce independence," of growers not wanting to be a part of the overall promotion effort. However as individuals, "we don't have the strength that we can as a unit," he said."

John Rice, representing Rice Fruit Company in Adams County, believes consumers want to support local produce. "The thing that we are trying to sell to consumers, besides getting good tasty fruit in their hands, is the special character of this part of the world," said Rice. "We have green fields, small farms, and orchards. I believe there is a strong consumer ideal that they would like to support local agriculture."

Surprisingly enough, said Rice, access to local produce in grocery stores is "very, very limited. Shelf space has become real estate that is bought and sold at a very high price. What we're producing in this area is tasty apples in varieties that they want, that have nostalgic value, and it should be available to them," he said.

"It's not that we have a product that people don't want to buy. We have to fight our way back onto the shelves," he said.

Identifying products as local produce is "the brand equity that we have to depend on now," he said. "We have to push local industry to acquiesce."

Greener Pastures Coming For Milk Vending Programs

ALBANY, N.Y. — A bill sponsored by Assembly Agriculture Committee Chair Bill Magee (D-Nelson) that would provide an incentive for vending companies that want to enter the milk vending market has once again passed the Assembly.

"This bill just makes sense," Magee said. "In a world where every kind of sugar-filled drink is being pushed on our kids, why not help and assist vending companies with selling a healthy, nutritious drink like milk?"

The bill specifically provides licensed vending companies with relief from the burdensome and duplicative regulations of having to register with the Department of Agriculture and Markets as a milk dealer. The vending companies already have to comply with the very stringent health guidelines of the Department of Health and the State Sanitary Code in ensuring the public's health.

Recently, milk vending programs have proven very successful as Magee has implemented Project MOO (Milk Out in the Open) which has placed several milk machines in schools in Central New York and, in conjunction, the State University of New York at Morrisville followed the program and completed a study which demonstrated the viability of milk vending machines in schools. Likewise, United States Senator Charles Schumer has begun a program known as Vendi-Milk which similarly placed milk vending in schools.

Dairy Checkoff-Funded Research Works To Improve Reduced-Fat Cheeses

COLUMBUS, Ohio — National consumer survey data indicates that 49 percent of consumers look for reduced-fat cheeses at the grocery store. In responding to this demand for high-quality, reduced-fat dairy foods, dairy farmer-funded research has uncovered a process that could provide cheese lovers with an even better-tasting reduced-fat cheese that retains its texture and flavor intensity.

Dr. Duane Larick, a professor at North Carolina State University, with support from the checkoff-funded Extraordinary Dairy® product research/innovation program, discovered a method that uses new commercially available enzymes to derive natural flavor concentrates from whole milk instead of cheese. In addition to offering a better-tasting product for consumers, this method could save time and money for cheese manufacturers and the dairy industry overall.

"Using whole milk to create these natural cheese-flavor concentrates offers potential cost savings due to more economical production costs and time savings, because concentrates from whole milk take less time to produce than flavor concentrates made from cheese," Larick said. "In addition, this method can help increase the utilization of fluid milk, as the source for the natural cheese-flavor concentrates."

"Research such as this, allows the dairy promotion checkoff program to provide the dairy products to consumers that they want," said Scott Higgins, CEO of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East. "By giving consumers the products they want, the checkoff program is continuing to help increase the demand for dairy products."

Larick adds that the reduced-fat cheese created with the whole milk concentrates has received favorable taste scores from an expert panel of judges using the American Dairy Science Association protocol.

people," Valen said. Included in that team were other NJH-FA members and Rutgers University extension agents, as well as national Holstein personnel and chairpersons from previous national conventions.

Valen said it is an annual tradition for chairpersons past and present to meet and begin planning the following year's convention with the goal of making it "a better event every year."

Recreational tours offered to convention-goers this year include the Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island, Battleship New Jersey and the Aquatic Museum in Camden, dolphin watching, party boat fishing, historic tour of the Trenton battlefields, and Princeton College.

Farm and industry tours will include trips to Atlantic Blueberry Farm; Rutgers Blueberry-Cranberry Research Center; equine horse training and Show Place Farm; Cedar Lane Farm; Cape May Fisheries; Sheppard Farms, vegetable producers; and others.

A shopping trip to Cape May is also on the schedule.

"We are trying to showcase all of New Jersey," Valen said.

Convention guests will represent practically every state and several foreign countries, including Canada, Mexico, and Argentina.

New Jersey last hosted the National Holstein Convention in 1974.

north, according to Jamie Zimmerman, Dairy One general manager.

The company came into existence five years ago when Northeast DHIA and Dairylea Cooperative, Inc., based in Syracuse, N.Y. joined forces. Prior to that, the roots of Dairy One can be traced to the original New York DHIA, formed in the 1940s. In the early 1980s, New York DHIA had merged with similar associations from New England states to form the Northeast DHIA.

Dairy One offers a range of herd management services in addition to standard DHIA testing. These include forage and manure testing and access to a variety of herd management software. According to Zimmerman, dairy producers can choose to buy as little or as much service as they want from Dairy One.

The company operates milk testing laboratories in Ithaca, N.Y.; Hagerstown, Md.; and in State College, site of the former Pennsylvania DHIA lab.

Zimmerman said Pennsylvania DHIA technicians will keep their same jobs under Dairy One, while the consolidation will help streamline some administrative duties.

"Our whole focus is to bring value through our services," Zimmerman said.

Kummer Joins Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association Staff

PHILADELPHIA — Jean Kummer recently joined the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association as a public relations specialist.

In her position, Kummer will provide communications support to the organization by preparing news releases, newsletters, brochures, and other publications. She also will coordinate public relations and consumer events focusing on milk.

Kummer grew up on a dairy farm in Butler County in western Pennsylvania. She was graduated from Penn State in 1992 with a bachelor's degree in agricultural sciences and earned a master's degree from Penn State in 1995 in agricultural and extension education.

Before joining the Mid-Atlantic staff, Kummer worked for the Penn State Cooperative Extension service as a dairy specialist in Beaver, Butler, and Lawrence counties. Her focus was on adult education programs and 4-H dairy youth education.

Jean Kummer

"We are pleased to have Jean on our staff," said Laura England, director of communications. "She will play a key role in our efforts to promote milk and the many health benefits it provides."

Kummer resides in Blue Bell in Montgomery County.

Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association Launches New Website

PHILADELPHIA — Looking for information about dairy promotion activities in the Mid-Atlantic region? Look no further than www.dairyspot.com, a new Website created by Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association.

Launched in mid-June, the Website features information ranging from classroom activities and school foodservice ideas to nutrition research and dairy recipes. Teachers, health professionals, and consumers in general will find helpful information about milk and dairy products and how they can be part of a healthy lifestyle.

"In designing dairyspot.com, we focused on the health and nutritional benefits of milk and dairy products," said Laura England, director of communications. "The Website also showcases the many dairy promotion activities we do on behalf of Mid-Atlantic dairy farmers."

In a section titled "Dairy Industry Showcase," dairy farmers can learn more about the dairy checkoff program and how it is working to increase dairy product demand. This section also includes a regular dairy farmer feature designed to tell consumers about life on the farm.

The Website also highlights upcoming activities and promotions and provides relevant contact information for the media.

Warren County To Get 350-Acre Conservation Demonstration Site

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At its recent meeting in Harrisburg, the Pennsylvania State Conservation Commission (SCC) approved a $458,884 purchase agreement between Warren County Conservation District and the state Department of General Services (DGS) for 350 acres of the former Warren State Hospital dairy farm operation used by the district as the Hatch Run Conservation Demonstration Area (HRCDA).

The 11-member SCC is the oversight and support agency for the state's 66 county conservation districts, and by policy requires districts to gain SCC approval before entering into contracts if the estimated project cost exceeds $250,000.

Under a management agreement with DGS since 1997, the Warren County Conservation District has been using the HRCDA for conservation demonstration projects — ranging from timber harvest management and intensive grazing of livestock to wildlife habitat plantings and even pond building and maintenance. About 1,000 people per year have been using the site through attending educational programs offered there, according to Warren County District Manager Richard Mader. He hopes to soon double that.

The district is purchasing the land to ensure its long-term use and development by the conservation district. The payment for the property is to be financed through the long-term sale of timber according to an approved forestry stewardship plan that provides sustainable timber harvest.

About 100 acres of the property is forested, with the majority of the remainder agricultural and several acres in a transition between cropland and forestland. The agricultural land includes a number of erosion and sedimentation control practices and a 25-acre intensive grazing demonstration area.

There are about four miles of nature trails, several four-square-acre timber harvesting demonstration plots, and several acres of wildlife and upland habitat plantings done in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

"We've been doing education at Hatch Run since we started there in 1997. The whole purpose was that it would be an educational area," Mader said. "We're purchasing it because we need to have control of the property, and it will help pave the way for building an educational facility on the site and eventually our offices will be located there."

The original five-year management agreement with DGS allowed the district to follow a sustainable timber harvest plan to finance the installation of improvements for environmental education. Since 1997, timber sales on the property have generated $200,000, with about $75,000 spent on the improvements.

Mader said it became obvious the ideal situation would be to have the district offices located near the demonstration area. Last year, with the help of the district's state representative, the district acquired 3.5 acres of the property for the purpose of building a conservation education center and an office complex. Development of the education center is in the planning stages. A parking lot was built using and demonstrating environmentally sensitive road maintenance techniques as espoused by the SCC Dirt and Gravel Road Maintenance Program.

Late last year, the district began renegotiations with the DGS for the purchase of the property, located north of North Warren, east of Rt. 62, at the intersection of Hatch Run Road and Conewango Avenue in Glade Township.

The SCC approved the negotiated deal that allows the district to use $122,500 of receipts from prior timber sales as a down payment, with the rest to be paid from timber sales realized over the next 20 years.

Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team

SALUTING AMERICA'S FOOD INDUSTRY
Del Voight
Extension Agronomy Agent
Capitol Region

This article will discuss a small portion of the food production system. Most of the information was obtained through the Agriculture Ambassador program that I attended in Jackson, Miss.

We as Americans have the safest, most reliable food production system in the world.

Consider this:

The average life expectancy in the U.S. today is 76.1 years, compared with 70 years in 1960, 60 years in 1930, and 47 years in 1900. I am in my 30s and consider myself young, but I pause to think that back in the 1900s I would have been considered old.

Today, U.S citizens have access to a wide variety of nourishing fruits, vegetables, grains, meats, poultry, and dairy products. The quality, selection, and low cost make our food supply the envy of the rest of the world.

Again, our modern agricultural practices allow a very small percentage of our population to produce more agricultural products than any other country. Take a look at these statistics on percentages of income spent on food as opposed to percentages of population in agriculture. We spend 11 percent of our income on food while only 2 percent of our population is involved with farming. If you lived in France, 28 percent of your income would go to food bills and 14 percent of the population would be involved with farming.

Consider living in India, where 64 percent of your income would go to food and 68 percent of the population are farming. Chances are, you would be farming and working to eat.

Here's a different perspective. This one may hit a little closer to home. Imagine you went to the grocery store to pick up a few things, such as a gallon of milk, a dozen eggs, five pounds of sugar, one pound of cheddar cheese, one pound of sirloin steak, and a two-pound bag of apples. How much would you expect to pay? On average, in the U.S. it would cost about $18.79.

Can anyone guess what the same groceries would cost in Spain? How about China? In Spain that same bag would cost $28.14 and in China that bag would cost $74.23.

Like any other industry, agriculture has and must continue to evolve with technology. Farm output has more than doubled since the year 1940. Agriculture has advanced more rapidly in the past 50 years than in the past 12,000 years combined.

Consider the magnitude of the following statistics:

Production of food has increased by 230 percent since 1940 and doubled since 1960 — using the same amount of cropland. In 1960 one farmer fed 25 people. Each of today's U.S. farmers feeds 129 people. In 1950, U.S. farmers produced 50 bushels of corn per acre — today's farmer will produce 127.1 bushels of corn per acre. Today's Americans would spend about $195 billion more per year on food if we were to begin using technology of the 1950s again.

The use of modern agriculture practices are allowing farmers to produce more food and food at lower cost for consumers in America and around the world. Each day, approximately $6 million in U.S. agricultural products such as grains, oilseeds, cotton, meats, vegetables, and snack foods will be consigned to export to foreign markets.

The U.S. plays a huge role in providing food to foreign markets. We provide 19 percent of the world's cotton, 49 percent of the world's soybeans, 12 percent of the world's wheat, and 36 percent of the world's corn. In addition, the $100 billion in annual exports create jobs for about 1 million workers throughout the U.S.

It is imperative that the U.S. continues the current level of food production in order to sustain our foreign export levels. As the population of the world increases and the amount of available farm land decreases, many are questioning if the U.S. can maintain food production levels to keep our food costs down and our exports strong.

U.S. agriculture will face many challenges in the next millennium. World population will peak at 8.5 billion people in 2035 from today's 6 billion and 1980's 4.3 billion. The world must produce as much food in the next 40-80 years as in the past 12,000 years, and on less land than ever before. Only 7 percent of Earth's surface is available for agricultural production, and this decreases daily.

Agriculture practices have changed dramatically since 1900. Modern technology has made it possible for U.S. farmers to produce much higher yields on less land. As a result, American families enjoy the cheapest, most abundant food supply in the world.

Delicious, nutritious, high-quality food is available to us at a very low cost. Therefore, today's Americans are eating better and living longer than ever before.

Modern agriculture practices are the cornerstone of U.S. food production. These practices will enable food production to thrive in the face of increasing world population and decreasing farmland. But this can only happen if we concentrate on agricultural research and the continued development of agricultural science and technology. Just like any other industry, agriculture must continue to evolve with technology to meet the ever-increasing demand for food.

DEP Secretary Visits Watershed Association, Tours Dairy Farm

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Mark Schweiker, Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary David E. Hess recently visited with the Chillisquaque-Limestone Watershed Association in Montour County to hear solutions the association and local partners have developed for watershed problems.

"The Chillisquaque-Limestone Watershed Association is a very young group, but I'm impressed by its vision for the future and its ability to form effective partnerships with three conservation districts, PPL Electric Utilities Corp. and others," Secretary Hess said.

Chillisquaque-Limestone Watershed Association President Thomas Benfer also gave Secretary Hess a tour of the Shultz Brothers dairy farm in Montour County to see how best management practices, such as streambank fencing, have improved the water quality of Mud Creek, a tributary of Chillisquaque Creek.

"I'm very pleased Secretary Hess is interested enough to visit our watershed and learn about our needs," Benfer said. "We need to increase the public's awareness of our watershed and its problems to build our membership, which will help us with specific projects in the future."

During his visit, Secretary Hess also toured a site on the Chillisquaque Creek where the Montour County Conservation District has applied for a Growing Greener grant. The project is for the design and permitting of streambank and channel stabilization at PPL's Montour Preserve, where erosion is causing sedimentation problems and threatening footbridges and interpretive trails.

The summer issue of Foraging Around, the newsletter of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, is scheduled July 13 in Lancaster Farming.

The section is scheduled to include feature information about Project Grass. Included: grazier features, grass-fed beef reports, and news and notes for the grazier and hay grower.

Red And White Cow Tops 60,000 Pounds Production In 365 Days

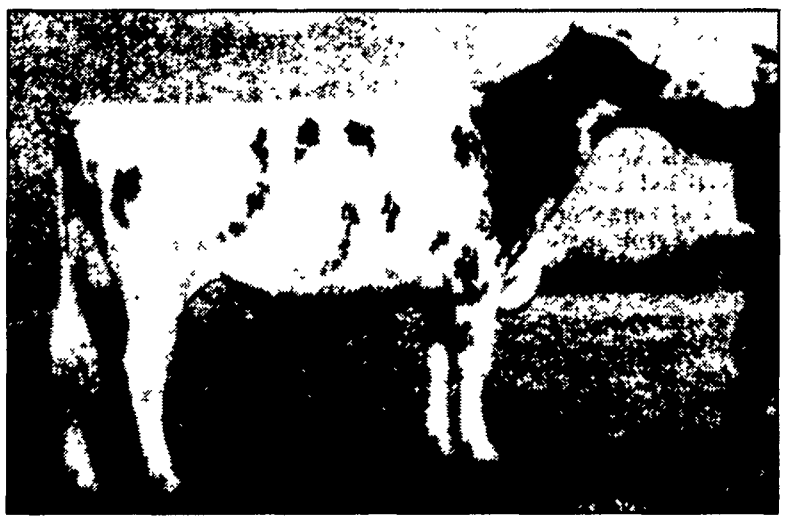
MARSHFIELD, Wis. — The Red and White Dairy Cattle Association (RWDCA) has announced a new breed record for milk production. Sikkema-Star Licric Vee-Red, owned by Bill and Roxanne Case of Marshfield, Wis., has completed a new world production record of 60,694 pounds of milk with 2,592 pounds of butterfat and 1,767 pounds of protein, produced from twice a day milking over 365 days. This third lactation for Vee is her second over 50,000 pounds of milk, surpassing the previous record set in January by Elm-Park Moselle-Red-ET.

An outstanding production and type individual, Vee is classified Excellent-91. She is a daughter of Sire Hi-Val Licorice-Red. Her dam is by Blackcrest Karmel, with two records over 24,000 pounds of milk. Her granddam, by To-Mar Wister, is a daughter of Exranco Ehancer Vee-Red, who was classified Very Good-87 and awarded Dam of Merit status.

The Cases purchased Vee at the Sikkema Star Holstein Dispersal Sale in 1995. Vee sold as a three-day-old calf for $225, and instantly began her life in the limelight for the Cases.

"The cow is wide-muzzled and never quits eating," said Bill Case. "She never has. She's one dairy machine."

Vee's first daughter in production, Victoria, is also making her mark in the herd, having just completed her first lactation with over 38,000 pounds of milk.



Sikkema-Star Licric Vee-Red

Lancaster Farming's annual Dairy of Distinction section is July 27. The issue is scheduled to include feature farm reports on more than two dozen Dairy of Distinction award winners.

Friendly Bacteria Help Fight Potato Rot Fungi

PEORIA, Ill. — Soil-dwelling bacteria are scientists' latest weapon against an unsightly post-harvest disease called dry rot that costs U.S. potato growers as much as $250 million annually in tuber losses.

Agricultural Research Service scientists Patricia Slininger, David Schisler and colleagues are testing the bacteria as a biological alternative to thiabendazole (TBZ), a chemical fungicide that's losing its effectiveness against Fusarium sambucinum, the main culprit behind dry rot.

Through ARS, its in-house research agency, the U.S. Department of Agriculture holds two patents on the bacteria as biological dry rot control agents. A third patent covers their use to inhibit sprouting, another costly potato storage problem.

The two scientists began exploring the bacteria's biocontrol potential in 1994, when a third ARS researcher, Ann Desjardens, reported TBZ resistance in 90 percent of dry rot strains she isolated from potato fields.

At ARS' National Center for Agricultural Utilization Research in Peoria, Ill., Slininger and Schisler researched different physical and nutritional conditions for mass-producing the bacteria in liquid culture and keeping them viable during cold storage.

Lab tests and trial runs in potato storage houses indicate that spraying tubers with the bacteria can diminish dry rot disease by 59 percent or more. The six Pseudomonas and Enterobacter strains being tested are harmless to humans, but form a living bandage around potato wound sites that stymies dry rot infections.

The bacteria secrete natural antibiotics that suppress the dry rot fungus. One such antibiotic, indoleacetic acid, may also help retard sprouting on stored potatoes. Cultures of some of the biocontrol bacteria seem to retard stored potato sprouting nearly as well as 1-methylethyl-3-chlorophenylcarbamate (CIPC). Although used on more than half the U.S. potato crop, CIPC faces tighter regulation due to concerns over its persistence in the environment and on the spuds.

Now that the patents are available for licensing, the Peoria scientists are seeking a commercial partner to adapt the technology for market use.

High-Maysin Corn Available For Breeding

TIFTON, Ga. — Agricultural Research Service scientists are accepting seed requests for new corn populations whose silks deter caterpillar feeding with a natural repellant called maysin.

By crossing the maysin-rich corn with elite commercial lines, plant breeders can eventually provide farmers with hybrids that will fare better against lepidopteran pests like the corn earworm. Its caterpillar stage causes $100 million annually in yield losses and control costs.

"The high-maysin material available now includes two corn populations," says Neil W. Widstrom, a geneticist in ARS' Crop Genetics and Breeding Research Unit at Tifton, Georgia.

"It will be most useful to sweet-corn breeders, since there's more concern about ear damage for that crop than for dent corn."

Registration of EPM6 (a purple-kerneled population) and SIM6 (a yellow-kerneled population) concludes 23 years of maysin research by scientists at ARS laboratories.

Through breeding and backcrossing, scientists took a two-pronged approach to curbing earworm damage. First, they selected plants whose silks produce enough maysin to stop the caterpillar from feeding after just a few bites.

Second, they chose plants with tight husks that force the pest to chew the silks before the kernels, which don't contain maysin.

Maysin works by binding up certain proteins in the earworm's gut so that it cannot grow. But humans, other animals, and beneficial insects face no danger from maysin.

Currently, farmers battle earworms with chemical insecticides. In Florida, where half the nation's fresh-market sweet corn is grown, this can often mean spraying 30-40 times a season to ensure the blemish-free ears consumers desire.

But with high-maysin hybrids, scientists predict, insecticide use could be cut in half. Their optimism is rooted in laboratory and field trials showing higher earworm mortality rates and less ear damage in high-maysin corn than in nonmaysin corn.

The ARS effort in Tifton, Ga., has demonstrated that transferring maysin to silks of elite inbred lines is feasible, says Widstrom, adding "we'll honor requests for breeder seed of the released high-maysin populations for at least five years." Samples are limited to 100 grams, or about 300 to 500 seeds per request.

Neil W. Widstrom is in the USDA-ARS Crop Genetics and Breeding Research Unit, (229) 387-2341.

Swenson Speaks On Important Water And Ag Issues

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Leland Swenson, past president of the National Farmers Union, spoke at the Great Lakes Forum on Agriculture here last week to a delegation of agriculture commissioners from the Northeast United States and Canada about the importance of water issues and agriculture.

"Water is quickly becoming a critical issue in agriculture, even more significant than biotechnology or trade," said Swenson.

In his presentation, Swenson explained how water issues are growing more important, especially regarding the future of the country's water supply. A growing population with changing priorities is beginning to affect the quantity, quality, distribution and management of water, he said.

Swenson raised questions about the abundance and scarcity of water in different areas of the country, the costs of recycling water for different uses and priorities for water use.

"Our country's changing priorities impact water availability and quality for food production, which, in turn, impact the structure of farming," said Swenson. He asked the audience to weigh how the country should prioritize the uses of water between human consumption, food production, navigation, industry, energy production, wildlife and recreation.

Swenson also discussed the impacts that market forces, personal water rights and government regulations have on water resources.

"Our country's priorities for water are changing as population centers change, as the structure of farming changes and as we are forced to recognize climate change impacts. We must be prepared to address those changes," Swenson added.

CAFF Names Leland Swenson Executive Director

DAVIS, Calif. — The Community Alliance with Family Farmers (CAFF) has announced the appointment of Leland Swenson as the organization's executive director.

Swenson most recently served as president of the National Farmers Union, a position he held from 1988 until March of this year.

CAFF is a nonprofit membership organization founded in 1978 with regional chapters throughout California. CAFF uses practical information-sharing, organizing and advocacy in support of strong, ecologically sound family farms and healthy rural communities.

"I look forward to the opportunity to work with agriculture producers in California," Swenson said. "CAFF is a dynamic organization with a long history of farmer-to-farmer and outreach programs. These types of programs, linking family farmers and urban communities, will help our efforts to make sustainability a core principle in all food and agriculture policy."

While Swenson was with the National Farmers Union he was responsible for organizing and leading the historic 1999 National Agricultural Summit. The gathering brought together 29 of the nation's farm and commodity organizations to address serious farm economy conditions such as a farm safety net, industry concentration, risk management and international trade.

Swenson also organized the Rally for Rural America in March 2000. That event attracted thousands of farmers, church leaders, labor organizations and rural people to Washington, D.C. to send a strong message to Capitol Hill that the rural crisis was more than an economic crisis but also a social and cultural crisis in rural America.

"We are pleased to have Lee Swenson on board to spearhead our efforts on behalf of family farmers," said CAFF Board President Judith Redmond. "His experience with family-farm advocacy will benefit all California agriculture producers and rural communities."

NFU Says World Food Security Depends On Farmers' Security

ROME, Italy — Leaders of the National Farmers Union who attended this week's World Food Summit in Rome made the case that food security for the world's hungry depends on the security of the family farmers who produce the food.

NFU President Dave Frederickson lamented the fact that 800 million people worldwide are malnourished while many nations have a surplus of commodities that depress farm prices. "We have the production," Frederickson said, "yet people continue to starve. Governments around the world must get serious about the commitments they made at the World Food Summit in 1996."

Frederickson was referring to a goal developed at the 1996 meetings to reduce the world's hungry by half by 2015. The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, which hosted the 1996 and 2002 summits, states that the number of hungry people must be reduced by 20 million per year to reach the 2015 target. In the five years since the summit, the annual decline in world hunger has been less than half the target.

"Low commodity prices are not contributing to food security," said Frederickson. "Politics by a number of governments around the world have pushed the idea that if we lower our prices enough, demand will increase. On the contrary, the low-price mentality has led to a concentration of wealth, power, land for the industries downstream from the farmer such as processing, retailing and transportation."

Disappointment surrounded this week's meetings since only two heads of states from industrialized nations attended, said Frederickson. The Farmers Union leader said it was also disappointing that farmers were not better represented. Frederickson said farmers should be at the table whenever food and hunger is discussed.

"One attendee from the African region suggested holding a farmers' summit that would allow the need for economic security for farmers to be discussed. We'd support such an initiative," Frederick said.

Frederickson suggested the nations that have had assistance developing their economies, such as Japan and European countries following World War II, have not only solved their hunger problems, but also have become valuable trading partners to other industrialized nations. "That development always begins with a stable agricultural production system," he said.

Frederickson led a Farmers Union delegation to the summit that included NFU Vice President Alan Bergman, Wisconsin Farmers Union President Bill Brey, North Dakota Farmers Union President Robert Carlson, Minnesota Farmers Union President Doug Peterson, NFU Counsel Dave Velde and NFU Administrative Vice President Clay Pederson.

Conservation Districts Announce Poster Contest Winners

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc. (PACD) announced June 5 the winners of the 2002 PACD Poster Contest.

The contest, open to students in grades K-12, offers young people an opportunity to express their views on natural resources and the environment through art.

The two poster contest themes for 2002 are "The Gift of Trees" and "Exploring Nature in Your Neighborhood."

The winners of the 2002 PACD Poster Contest are Leah Kuhn, York County; Julie Ivicic, Centre County; Alisha Webb, Bedford County; Molly Lower, York County; and Melissa Hullihan, Northumberland County.

These five students will each be awarded a cash prize and a framed certificate, courtesy of the PACD Auxiliary, and will be invited to attend the PACD Awards Luncheon Program, where their posters will be unveiled to the audience.

Individual entries to the PACD Poster Contest previously captured first place in a competition conducted by their county conservation district. Winners of the PACD statewide poster contest will be forwarded to the National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD) to represent Pennsylvania in the NACD National Poster Contest.

The PACD annually hosts a poster contest for students in grades K-12. The contest is sponsored by the PACD Auxiliary and is open to students from public and private schools. Annual poster contest themes vary based on National Wildlife Week activities, NACD Stewardship Week activities, and the availability of PACD supporting materials.

Publication Showcases Urban-Rural Cooperation

WASHINGTON, D.C. —A new publication and Web site released by American Farmland Trust and The United States Conference of Mayors highlight unprecedented cooperation between rural and urban leaders on policies that will promote smarter land use decisions affecting farms and cities.

Town Meets Country: Farm-City Forums on Land and Community reports on the results of five meetings held around the country to explore land use issues facing urban and rural communities. The forums revealed that farmers and urbanites have a common enemy: land-wasting sprawl development.

"Sprawl hurts farms and cities alike by drawing development out onto the fertile countryside surrounding cities," said American Farmland Trust President Ralph Grossi.

"We need to recycle abandoned industrial brown fields and revitalize urban areas in order to safeguard our green fields from development."

"Protecting farmland and agriculture is extremely important to the overall quality of life within cities," said Charlotte Mayor Patrick McCrory, who chairs the U.S. Conference of Mayors Environment Committee. "More than half of our food is grown on farmland near cities. We must protect this resource for future generations of city residents."

The model farm-city forums were held in Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Charlotte, North Carolina; Rochester, New York; and in both Everett and Tacoma, Washington.

One of the most surprising results of the forums was that many participants reported that they had never before sat down to discuss land use issues with their counterparts from the city or countryside.

Don Stuart, American Farmland Trust's Pacific Northwest regional director, who coordinated the forums in Tacoma and Everett, Washington, said, "Farms cannot exist without cities and cities cannot exist without farms. It's a relationship that goes back to the dawn of history. Working together, farmers and urbanites can be a powerful force to control sprawl."

To extend resources and information to all communities around the country, AFT and USCM have set up a Web site with details on how to organize a farm-city forum, including sample agendas and invitations. This, as well as the publication, can be found at www.farmland.org/farm—city—forum, and www.usmayors.org.

The new publication and Web site emerged from a national level partnership between AFT and The U.S. Conference of Mayors formed in June of 1999 to focus on issues concerning the preservation of America's farmland and the revitalization of cities.

Although the partnership is unique, AFT also works closely with a number of organizations dedicated to smart growth. AFT President Ralph Grossi serves as chairman of Smart Growth America, a nationwide coalition promoting a better way to grow: one that protects farmland and open space, revitalizes neighborhoods, keeps housing affordable, and provides more transportation choices.

The summer issue of Foraging Around, the newsletter of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, is scheduled July 13 in Lancaster Farming.

The section is scheduled to include feature information about Project Grass. Included: grazier features, grass-fed beef reports, and news and notes for the grazier and hay grower.

"TICO/FERBO HOSE REELS"

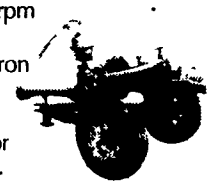
The standard pump features a high efficiency open-vane impeller with an interchangeable wear ring and fixed cutting blade to handle all but the very toughest of straw, hay or other difficult residuals. For these conditions, the chopper unit can be simply bolted to the pump where it is driven by the existing pump shaft, enabling it to handle virtually any waste products requiring chopping.

A number of additional features make these the most versatile and reliable units on the market:

- Special permanently lubricated mechanical seal for longer life
- Over-sized bearings
- Lubricated chopper shaft bearings
- Chopper shaft shear-pin to reduce risk of damage to the shaft and impeller
- A range of four tractor pto pumps and four bare-shaft pumps with flows from 105-1000 gpm
- Replaceable wear ring
- 540 rpm or 1000 rpm speeds
- Finest grade cast iron for high efficiency
- Unique water-cooled gearbox for extended gear life.



The pump is mounted on a heavy-duty wheeled cart with pto shaft, 6" quick-action suction fittings and 4" discharge fittings as standard.

NCBA Requests Congress To Fund Study On Livestock, Meat Industry

DENVER, Colo. — The National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) is calling on the U.S. House and Senate Agriculture and Appropriations Committees to find funding for research that would get to the bottom of volatile markets and low prices for cattle producers.

In a June 17 letter to the committees, Wythe Willey, NCBA president, asked that funding be provided to USDA to "contract with an unbiased independent consortium of several preeminent business schools to conduct a thorough analysis of the entire livestock, poultry, and meat protein complex."

The letter pointed out that many changes have occurred over the past several years in the ways livestock are priced, sold, and raised. Recently, producers have faced tremendous volatility in the prices they've received for their animals.

The analysis, according to Willey, should take a broad look at the underlying fundamentals of the industry as well as those associated with it. It should also evaluate the affect of international trade on the industry, as well as the impact of regulatory activities and costs of regulatory compliance at all levels.

In the letter, Willey said increasing levels of concentration should be one of the issues investigated. Less than 40 percent of the steer and heifer slaughter was conducted by the top four firms in 1980, and more than 80 percent is processed by the top four today. However, Willey pointed out that during the last 10 years, prices have been highly variable while market concentration has remained virtually unchanged.

Willey, a beef producer from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, pointed out that during difficult times like these "we need to take a careful and pragmatic look at the fundamental factors impacting our industries." He said this would allow producers to make informed decisions about the future and "assure that unintended consequences do not outweigh any potential benefits from legislated change."

Part of the analysis should include "looking at different business models and industry structures that will help producers maintain long-term profitability." The industry is changing rapidly, Willey said, and those changes should be recognized and understood.

Willey also said NCBA believes "this analysis should be conducted with an eye to discerning the best long range methods for livestock producers to maintain global competitiveness, sustainability and longevity while meeting the long-term needs of consumers, who are the ultimate source of every producer dollar."

Pa. Cattlemen Schedule Field Day

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, along with several affiliates and other organizations, have scheduled their annual Summer Cattlemen's Field Day for Saturday, July 27 in the Gettysburg, Adams County area.

The main location of the program will be the Eisenhower Historic Site, located just a few minutes southwest of Gettysburg.

There will be special tours of the historic battleground areas, as well as the Eisenhower buildings, including the Eisenhower home, Brown's Ranch and Mason-Dixon Farms.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, with bus tours scheduled not only of the battleground area, but also of Brown's Ranch, primarily to observe a wide variety of conservation practices.

During the noon program, there will be a presentation by Jana Malot, grazing specialist with NRCS, on the use of a new method of determining nutritive value of grassland.

Some of the practices that will be observed on the Brown Ranch are riparian buffers, crossings, water control structures, sub-surface drainage areas, watering systems, fencing, and critical area stabilization. Several leaders in conservation will lead the discussion about these practices at the Brown Ranch. Mr. Jere Wingert, extension area agent in the Adams County area will discuss the breeding program results and techniques used at the Brown Ranch.

Maxon-Dixon Farms, Inc. is a family-owned farm that includes 2,600 acres, over 2,300 milk cows, and over 1,700 replacements. The breeding endeavors are geared toward functional-type cows with a higher than 25,000-pound herd average milk production. The cows are milked three times daily in two double-12 herring-bone shaped milking parlors and one double-24 parlor.

Being environmentally conscious, Mason-Dixon Farms saw an opportunity to become energy self-sufficient with the installation of biogas digester in 1979. It provides not only more energy than the farm can use but also, with the digested manure, they can fertilize as well as irrigate crops using a slurry irrigation center-pivot system. They have also designed and built farm machines of industrial quality and size. Mason-Dixon Farm will be toured on Saturday afternoon.

Field Day attendees may take a guided bus tour of the Gettysburg Battleground sites, and will have access to the Eisenhower Home. The tours are being organized by Tom Vossler, an Adams County Simmental breeder and battlefield guide.

A large commercial hay harvesting operation owned and operated by Larry Wilkinson will also be toured Saturday afternoon. The hay harvested from over 3,000 acres is sold for livestock feeding, mushroom compost and several other purposes.

The event is co-sponsored by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, Adams County Beef Producers, South Central Cattlemen's Association, Pennsylvania Grazing Lands Coalition Initiative, and the National Park Service.

Headquarters will be the Super 8 Motel at (717) 337-2160. Ask for the Cattlemen's rate ($75), although there are many other hotels in Gettysburg area. There are also many camping facilities nearby. More information about the commercial trade show, arrangements for tour groups, and other specifics about the Field Day can be obtained by contacting Ray and Mary Grimes at (717) 334-1022, or the PCA Office at phone/fax (814) 238-5888, or by visiting the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association Website at www.pacattle.org.

NASS
Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

Editor's Note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

APPLE AND PEAR POSTHARVEST PRACTICES

Because apples and pears are considered "kids' crops," they can be under greater scrutiny concerning food safety issues. Therefore, it is important that the fruit industry has reliable and objective information about the use of agricultural chemicals applied to fruit both before and after harvest.

Previous surveys from USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) have shown that postharvest chemicals are applied at lower than the recommended label rates and to only a fraction of the crop. This information is very beneficial to the industry, as it is used to review tolerance levels for registering products under the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA) of 1996. It is important to get the facts to other agencies so they don't assume maximum label rates are being used on the entire crop.

Postharvest chemical usage statistics have been published annually by NASS since 1998 for various fruit and field crops. Apples have only appeared in the first report and postharvest chemicals used on pears have never been studied. Trained interviewers will contact 2,100 apple and pear storage facilities across six states. In Pennsylvania, more than 200 apple storage operators will be asked for their help with this project along with those in California, Michigan, New York, and Washington. The pear survey is limited to California, Oregon, and Washington.

The survey includes questions about chemicals used, application methods, pest management practices, volume treated, and application rates.

The Ag Chemical Usage program also includes reports about chemical applications to fruit, vegetables, and field crops before harvest. Other reports also include applications to livestock and horticultural crops.

The most recent survey about preharvest chemical applications on fruit will be published on July 17. The results of the post harvest survey will be published in March 2003. These and all other reports on this subject can be found at www.usda.gov/nass/. Use the Search button to find reports about "Agricultural Chemicals" under the "Commodity" listing.

Nursery And Floriculture Chemical Practices

The first-ever report of agricultural chemical usage on horticultural crops was released in April and revised on May 8, 2002. The entire 200-page report can be found on the Internet by following instructions in the previous paragraph.

U.S. Cattle Counted

Cattle inventories, births, and deaths are measured twice a year — January and July. In July, about 9,500 of the largest cattle operations (including dairies) are contacted nationwide to help establish official statistics at the national level.

In Pennsylvania, only 120 of the largest cattle and dairy operations are asked for their help with this national study. However, the January survey includes many more farms from Pennsylvania and across the nation to provide enough detail to publish state level statistics for Pennsylvania and other states.

The cattle statistics program also includes reports detailing cattle on feed, average prices received by growers, production, disposition and income, slaughter statistics, and beef products in cold storage.The results of cattle surveys can be found at www.usda.gov/nass/. Use the Search button to find the next "Cattle" report issued on July 19.

Crop And Fruit Yields Forecasted

From May to November, NASS publishes the official USDA yield and production forecasts for the major field crops and tree fruits in Pennsylvania and around the country. Forecasts are based on responses to periodic fruit surveys and monthly Ag Yield Surveys when farmers estimate expected yields from their own fields.

Forecasted crops include winter wheat, barley, oats, corn for grain, soybeans, sorghum, hay, hay stocks, apples, peaches, pears, and cherries.

We ask growers because they are the best source of information about the crops they grow. They see the crop develop daily and they have the best idea of how the weather is affecting their crop. Using their years of experience, they can make the best estimate of their expected yields based on current crop conditions.

It is too risky to use weather predictions when setting yield forecasts. Forecasts are based on information from farmers who must assume that average conditions will prevail through the end of the season. Potential lower yields from drought, flood, or other poor growing conditions are reflected in the following months' yield surveys.

Each month we ask about different crops depending on their stage of growth. In Pennsylvania, we ask 150-600 growers for their help with the Ag Yield Survey, depending on the field crops included that particular month. Fruit forecast surveys are sent to all known fruit producers across Pennsylvania.

These production forecasts give an important advance warning of the size of each crop in Pennsylvania and across the nation. For example, if a large crop is expected, contract harvesters, packers, transportation companies, and storage facilities must be ready to handle the extra volume. A small crop warns about the possible need to plan for alternate livestock feed sources or farmer- assistance programs such as the 1999 Drought Assistance Program.

The results of field crop and fruit yield surveys can be found at www.usda.gov/nass/. Use the Search button to find the "Crop Production" report issued around the 10th of each month and the "Cherry Production" report scheduled for July 1.

National Animal Identification Task Force Formed

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — The National Institute for Animal Agriculture (NIAA) has announced the formation of a task force to facilitate the advancement of animal identification in the U.S.

The National Food Animal Identification Task Force was established in April and conducted its first teleconference meeting in May. Task Force members will gather in Chicago in June where six working groups of the task force will meet and discuss various aspects of a national plan.

According to Neil Hammerschmidt, COO of the Wisconsin Livestock Identification Consortium and chair of NIAA's Animal Identification and Information Systems Committee, the mission of the task force is "to ensure the United States has an adequate animal identification system that supports the financial viability of animal agriculture.

"This stakeholder-based task force has the challenge to collectively develop a national identification plan that provides the essential elements of a national program," said Hammerschmidt, "that can be implemented timely and cost effectively."

Hammerschmidt said the task force is a unified effort involving industry and government. More than 25 industry organizations and a few government agencies have accepted NIAA's invitation to participate on the task force. In all, more than 75 individuals are serving on the various working groups.

Hammerschmidt pointed out that several animal identification work groups and entities have made significant progress during the past year. "The intent of this task force is not to duplicate such efforts, but to incorporate them into a broad plan that provides greater opportunity for a national program," he said. "The vast leadership coming to grips with the key issues across the entire industry is what makes this effort outstanding." The issue-based working groups are co-chaired by 10 industry leaders throughout animal agriculture.

Dr. Mark Engle, with the National Pork Board, who vice chairs the NIAA Animal Identification and Information Systems Committee, said the task force will present a preliminary report during ID/Info Expo 2002, a conference and trade show devoted to the issue of animal identification and information systems. During this event, scheduled for July 28-Aug. 1, the National Food Animal Identification Symposium will provide a forum to advance the national plan for animal identification and consider the recommendations of the task force.

After feedback is collected from the symposium, Engle said, the task force will meet again and consider any revisions before presenting their final recommendations for a national plan at the U.S. Animal Health Association meeting scheduled for October in St. Louis.

Hammerschmidt and Engle's goal is to have a national plan defined by the end of the year.

Growing The Pennsylvania Dairy Industry

Bradley J. Hilty
Penn State Dairy Alliance

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The projections for the future of the Northeast dairy business published in the May 10 issue of Hoard's Dairyman are troubling. If those projections hold true, by 2020 cow numbers in the Northeast will have declined to nearly 76 percent of current numbers, while cow numbers in the western states are projected to grow by more than 50 percent.

Although total milk production is projected to grow slightly in the Northeast, our market share will have declined to about 14.5 percent, down from 20.4 percent in 1980. Until 2001, milk production in Pennsylvania has grown slightly on an annual basis (an average of 1.69 percent or approximately 150 million pounds per year). In contrast, the California dairy industry has grown an average of 4.41 percent, or approximately two billion pounds, per year.

The progressive dairy states are aggressively pursuing growth opportunities to expand their industry. The leaders of the New York dairy industry have accepted the challenge to grow their industry. Yet in Pennsylvania, the reaction to the word "growth" in reference to our dairy industry is often met with animosity. Why is this? Are we so attached to a way of life that we will let it be the downfall of our industry? Having grown up in western Pennsylvania, I saw what the loss of key industries does to local economies and social structures. The loss of the mining and steel industries has still adversely affected many communities. Should the Pennsylvania dairy industry incur a similar fate, the impact on our rural communities could be devastating. It is important that we grasp the challenge before us and proceed at a pace we have never imagined.

Grow is not the four-letter word it is often perceived to be by some of our producers and industry leaders. Growth can be achieved by a number of methods and all producers can benefit. This is not an issue of small versus large. Our dairy industry needs both the small and the large producers. However, if producers choose to stay small, the challenges they will face in the future will tax their management skills like never before.

The cost to raise a family continues to increase. Family living draws for our average dairy family are approximately $35,000-$40,000 per year depending on tax liabilities. That requires $500-$700 per cow per year in net farm income, more than most average dairy businesses generate. Due to inflation, that number will continue to increase. Within 10 years, assuming an average inflation rate of 3 percent, $47,000 must be withdrawn from the business to maintain the same standard of living that $35,000 provides today. At 4 percent inflation, the number is $52,000.

It will be important for our smaller producers to maximize the profitability of their businesses. They can achieve this by maximizing production and controlling their investments. This will require a different business model than small dairies have adopted in the past.

Owning the equipment and land required to raise crops to feed the cows is an expensive luxury. The returns on these investments cannot match the returns provided by a well-managed dairy cow, even at $2,000 per head. The general trends all indicate that as production increases, so does profitability. Average production per cow topped 18,000 pounds for the first time in 2000. Yet many herds throughout the state are well below this figure, as are the county averages for many counties in Pennsylvania.

This presents a tremendous opportunity to grow our industry. Increases in production per cow have averaged 2.25 percent for the past 25 years. By establishing an industry-wide initiative to improve production per cow, we could achieve a 5 to 7 percent growth rate per year. This increase would go a long way in meeting the need for the additional production required to keep our processors satisfied. To accomplish this, we need to focus on cow comfort and forage quality issues in many areas of the state. Higher producing herds must focus on transition cow management and development of standard operating procedures. There is no reason Pennsylvania cannot be in the top five states in milk production per cow.

Increasing production per cow is only one avenue for growing our dairy industry. Many Pennsylvania producers aspire to achieve the lifestyle only a larger dairy business can provide them. We need to provide opportunities for those producers who wish to expand to do so. We must also show other producers how expanding can actually improve their lifestyle. Whether to attend professional meetings, take vacations or participate in outside activities, larger producers have the luxury of spending more time away from the farm. They hire and train good employees to manage their business when they are away.

Successful expansions require successful planning. In recent years, many of our dairies have expanded themselves into a no-man's land of dairy business. It is no secret that at 600-800 cows, dairy businesses begin to reach the economies of scale that many of our producers hope to achieve by expanding to smaller sizes. Careful well-planned expansions will provide an opportunity to grow to the next level within a relatively short period of time (three to five years). Over-investing in equipment and facilities can lengthen this time frame and will even keep some producers from achieving their ultimate goal. As an industry, we must practice sound investment strategies, which often means short-term sacrifice for long-term gain.

To help provide ample opportunity for our dairies to grow, we must stop the flow of cattle out of our state. Why do our western competitors purchase animals in Pennsylvania and pay the trucking to haul them long distances? Could it be that they realize that earning capacity of a well-managed animal far exceeds that of most other investments required in a dairy business? Those producers selling cattle to move west could make another $50-$100 per head by selling animals to local producers, who would still purchase cows for less money than our western competitors are paying.

As dairy businesses continue to grow, they will provide ample opportunities for support businesses such as custom heifer growers, custom harvest operators, and even custom crop growers. We need to establish these businesses throughout the state, as the smaller producers can benefit from them as well as larger producers. In fact, smaller dairies will need to employ these services, as it will be increasingly difficult to maintain the investments necessary to operate a traditional do-it-all dairy business model. As an industry we must forge new relationships and help those who no longer want to operate a dairy business to find and develop the opportunities available to them.

The third avenue for stimulating the growth of our industry is to provide dairies with alternatives to relocate. Many areas of Pennsylvania and surrounding states continue to be developed into suburban communities. Within the next five to ten years, many dairies from these areas will be forced to make a decision to discontinue or relocate their businesses. In addition to these businesses, dairy producers from other countries have been immigrating to the United States. There are numerous areas in Pennsylvania that could accommodate an expanding dairy industry. If we are serious about revitalizing our state's dairy industry, we must promote Pennsylvania as a viable alternative to the Midwestern states for relocating a dairy business. We are close to the markets, have affordable land prices (in many areas of the state), and can provide a labor force with strong work ethics.

The challenge lies before us. We can continue on our current path and watch our industry decline, or we can switch paths and aggressively work to prevent this from happening. Ultimately, the responsibility lies in the hands of you, our state's producers, to decide which path you will take. Many producers are in this business because it provides them with a way of life that they can't find anywhere else. Now is the time to protect that way of life, by making tough business decisions. We must grow our industry, before it moves elsewhere, for once it is gone, your way of life just won't be the same.

PDA's Mark Butcher Chosen Livestock Grader Of The Year

MILLIE BUNTING
Market Staff

AUBURN, Ala. — Mark Butcher, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's (PDA's) livestock grading supervisor, received the Livestock Grader of the Year Award at the 42nd Annual National Livestock Grading and Marketing Association (NLGMA) workshop and conference in May at Auburn University.

Butcher was one of three Pennsylvanians attending the NLGMA's annual summer conference, whose main agenda involves a grading workshop which has been designated as the largest, most intensive training session for individuals interested in livestock grading and evaluation.

The other Pennsylvanians at the conference were Baldemar R. Ortiz, officer in charge of the USDA's market news office in New Holland, and Kenneth Ketterer, a PDA livestock market reporter.

In addition to reviewing current livestock situations in their various states, the 128 attendees participated in correlating slaughter and feeder cattle grades of most species and classes of livestock.

The association's membership consists of about 220 livestock reporters/graders from 30 states. Members can be federal, state, or county government employees actively engaged in livestock market reporting and/or grading according to the USDA grade standards.

Butcher got his start in market reporting years ago as an intern for John Zimmerman, retired head of the PDA livestock market division. After he was graduated from Delaware Valley College, Doylestown, with a degree in dairy science, Butcher worked at Em-Tran for two years before joining the PDA market news staff in July 1991.

Butcher's livestock grading work involves the grading of feeder pigs and return-to-farm Holstein calves at the terminal markets whose reports are important to the buyers as well as sellers in trade. His responsibilities also include covering the regular livestock auctions outside of Lancaster County with the aid of other state reporters who work in conjunction with the USDA Market News Service.

A native of York County, Butcher resides with his wife Stacey in Newport (Perry County). He said his farm background consists of growing up near a farm. He and his wife Stacey farm about 18-20 acres of produce for their own farmers market, growing everything from flowers in the spring to pumpkins for Hallowe'en.

Called "Butcher's Farm Market," it is located on 4th Street in Newport. He said the market is mostly run by his wife, but he does do most of the planting and growing work. That is his sideline.

Butcher considers his livestock grading and reporting work very important to the producers, the market owners, livestock buyers, and packers. In these days of more and more direct marketing, producers still look to the market reports for information.

Cattle Feeders Learn About Managing For A Satisfactory End Product

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — A recent Beef Quality Symposium is one of a series of educational meetings that are part of Pennsylvania's Blueprint For Success program.

Conducted at Yoder's Restaurant, New Holland, the event drew about 50 attendees and addressed beef quality issues such as tenderness and palatability, besides producer topics such as implants and dark cutters.

Dr. Edward Mills, associate professor in the dairy and animal science department at Penn State, opened the day by addressing factors affecting beef palatability.

Beef, which is on 97 percent of menus in America, is served more than seven million times a year in restaurants — 56 percent of entrees ordered, he said.

"What is the main driving force for that choice?" asked Mills. "People buy beef products because they like the taste of beef, and that's what we have to focus on, to keep our eye on that goal throughout the production process."

The palatability of cooked beef is determined by flavor, juiciness, and tenderness — each separate and very different components. "We have different opportunities to influence those with feeding, handling, and genetics," he said.

Factors that influence tenderness are the protein components of the muscle, the fat component, and the amount of connective tissue, which surrounds every muscle fiber. Tenderness can be measured by the Warner-Bratzler Shear Force test, which measures the force needed to shear through the meat, and Texture Profile Analysis, which crushes the sample.

In addition, pH has an affect on tenderness. Living muscles have a pH of about seven. This number will drop to below six, which is important in determining the characteristics of the meat.

"By day 10, most of the tenderization has already occurred," he said.

Dark cutters have a high pH — above six — which actually increases the meat's water-holding capacity.

"The challenging in marketing live animals is communicating the things that have been done," such as genetic selection for tenderness, he said. "You want to get paid for all that."

Dr. Robbi Pritchard, department of Animal and Range Sciences, South Dakota State University, addressed influences on marbling.

"Marbling is a tricky deal," he said. "You can't see it happen."

Pritchard highlighted energy demands in cattle. For instance, an animal's priorities for the energy they have consumed is bone, then muscle, then fat. "When they are born, a bull calf is four percent body fat," he said. "When a steer grades Choice, it is 28 percent body fat."

With this in mind, he addressed proper timing and use of implants.

"Implanting cranks up frame size. That means they're bigger when you get done, but it also means more groceries while they are growing," he said. A producer will have to "feed harder for fat deposition."

It is not that larger-framed animals may are genetically unable to marble — "it may be because there is not enough time to get up to target fat content," he said. "We need to change the energy level of the diets for the bigger-framed and implanted cattle."

Genetics are a set point in marbling. "We can't enhance it, all we can do it screw it up," he said.

Over implanting "will make them grow faster but will create an even bigger disparity between the lean gain potential and what they actually get" at the feedbunk, he said.

Marbling is not put on simply at the end of the time in the feedlot, noted Pritchard. "Things start happening early." After conducting his own research, he "realized that the difference in marbling happened on the front end. This told me that the difference in quality gained happened in the first two months on feed rather than the last two months on feed. Marbling starts much earlier than is generally recognized."

To test his ideas, Pritchard split his fall feeder calves in three groups. He didn't implant one group, implanted one group right away, and waited until February to implant the last group. "If we waited and let marbling get into the cattle, we got ride of the downside" (lowered marbling expression) of implanting.

One key to marbling is to match caloric intake with genetics. "it isn't just caloric intake, it's caloric intake for this animal,"he said.

Implants need to be matched with cattle and calories. "Find combinations that work. Maximize caloric intake on the finishing diet before they get that big implant.

Meeting Consumer's Needs

"The trick is increasing communication on the background of the cattle," he said. Pritchard checks the animals' ears to determine what the calves have been implanted with. "If they're fairly green when they come in, you may want to lay off the initial implant."

Implant potency is at its maximum two days after being injected into the animals, so he recommends waiting two to three weeks to implant to let the cattle "get set up on feed" first.

Dr. John Scanga addressed dark cutters and maturity effects on beef quality.

According to the 2000 National Beef Quality Audit, the cattle industry loses $5.43 per steer or heifer slaughtered because of losses incurred for dark cutters. This number is actually $1 lower then the 1995 audit.

"The incidence rate is down and I think we're getting a handle on it," he said. Two influencing factors may be that packing plants are scheduling delivery of cattle, so there is less time for the cattle to stand. Also the carcasses are getting cooled faster — they are chilled in 10-12 hours — than previously.

To put the problem in perspective, out of Scanga's study of 2.6 million cattle, the dark cutter incidence rate was less than .5 percent.

Dark cutters come from long-term stress, not excitement, even six hours before slaughter. Scanga believes that the condition comes from stress occurring one to two days before slaughter.

Animals with a poor temperament, which includes their ability to deal with stress, tend to have problems with palatability. Animals "used to a life of hardship," even if they were more high strung, tended not be dark cutters.

Dark cutters are seasonal, showing up at the end of July and August. "It takes a lot more energy for cattle to cool themselves than to stay warm," he said.

Heifers comprise most of the dark cutters, perhaps because they may start cycling if the MGA is not correct in the ration. Estrogen is a stress-producing hormone.

Too many, the wrong combination, or wrong timing of growth promotants may also cause dark cutters.

Dr. John Comerford, Penn State, addressed genetic implications of beef quality.

"Most carcass traits are not affected by one single gene," he said. 'We have to deal with a combination of groups of genes.

"Most carcass traits have moderate to high heritability. The reason for that is that most carcass traits can be changed genetically by selecting for it," he said.

Marbling, for example, is 25-40 percent heritable. "You can make a difference in the marbling score without having to affect other carcass traits," he said.

"We have some powerful tools available — it's not just weaning weights anymore, it's carcass traits."

Expected progeny differences (EPDs) are the deviation from the average for a sire's progeny.

With such a wide variation of traits not only across breeds but within breeds, EPDs are helpful in making proper selection decisions.

To wrap up the day, Scanga discussed animal identification and country-of-origin labeling.

Scanga believes that a standardized system of identification throughout the U.S. would be helpful to the cattle industry. Besides bringing about more efficient management and communication, an identification system would help to minimize impact of not only disease but also bioterorism impacts.

He also spoke about the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002, signed into law May 13, which mandates country-of-origin labeling. The law mandates that animals born, raised, and slaughtered in the U.S. will be labeled by Sept. 30, 2004.

The U.S. imports 16 percent of its supply of beef and cattle.

Drought Emergency Lifted In Six Counties, 14 Counties Returned To Normal Status

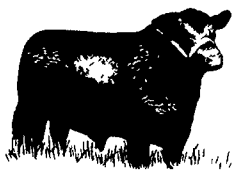
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Mark Schweiker recently lifted the drought emergency for six counties and restored 14 other counties to normal status.

Dauphin, Perry and Wayne counties have been upgraded to drought-watch status, which calls on residents to voluntarily conserve five percent of their daily water usage.

Bucks, Montgomery and Philadelphia counties have been upgraded to drought-warning status, which calls on residents to voluntarily conserve 10 percent to 15 percent of their daily water usage.

"Recent rains and water-conservation efforts have led to some improvement in water conditions in parts of the state," Gov. Schweiker said. "While I am pleased to announce that I am lifting mandatory water restrictions for six counties, I must stress that the drought is not over and that 14 counties remain in a drought emergency."

Fourteen counties — Adams, Bedford, Berks, Chester, Cumberland, Delaware, Franklin, Fulton, Lancaster, Lebanon, Lehigh, Northampton, Schuylkill and York — remain in drought-emergency status and should continue to follow mandatory water restrictions on non-essential water use.



Fourteen counties - Bradford, Centre, Columbia, Juniata, Lackawanna, Lycoming, Mifflin, Montour, Northumberland, Snyder, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Union and Wyoming — have been removed from drought warning and watch status and are returned to normal status.

A drought emergency, the third and most severe stage of the three drought declarations, imposes mandatory restrictions on non-essential water use and must be declared by the Governor.

A drought warning, the second stage of drought, calls for a 10 percent to 15 percent voluntary reduction in water consumption. A drought watch, the first and least severe stage, calls for a voluntary five percent reduction of non-essential water use.

In a drought emergency, mandatory water-use restrictions include strict limitations on the watering of lawns, athletic fields, golf courses and the washing of automobiles; not serving water in eating places unless requested by the customer; and closing down of indoor and outdoor ornamental fountains, waterfalls, and ornamental pools unless they are needed to sustain aquatic life.

Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary David E. Hess said the drought underscores the need for the state to address long-term water-resources issues.

"Currently, we don't have a full-time program to evaluate the status of Pennsylvania's water resources and promote the efficient use of water," Secretary Hess said.

"We need to develop long-term water-use strategies as part of a comprehensive approach to better manage our precious water resources. That is the main reason for Gov. Schweiker's initiative that calls for water-resources legislation."

Secretary Hess said that drought-emergency conditions have occurred in parts of Pennsylvania in five of the past seven years. He also noted that the State Water Plan has not been updated in more than 25 years.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The 24th annual "Dairy Day" will be Monday, Aug. 26 at the New York State Fair in Syracuse.

New York State dairy industry leaders and friends will once again meet at the New York State Fair to participate in this event. The fair dates for this year are Aug. 22-Sept. 2.

On Dairy Day, Aug. 26 at approximately 11 a.m., four-40 pound blocks of Gold Medal cheese produced in New York State and donated by the NYS Cheese Manufacturers Association will be auctioned to the highest bidder as part of efforts to promote the state's dairy industry.

Bidders are invited from retail and commercial establishments throughout New York to bid on the cheese. Past bids were approximately $500-$1,000. Successful bidders have included restaurants, hotels, utilities, Ag Radio Network and others.

The New York State Cheese Manufacturers Association is also donating a number of "party baskets." These baskets will include a variety of cheese and other products from throughout New York State. These attractive baskets will be auctioned to the highest bidder. Past bids were approximately $75-$300.

A number of 2½-pound and 5-pound packages of aged cheddar cheese will be auctioned to the highest bidder prior to the sale of the Gold Medal cheese. Arrangements have been made to store the small packages in the cooler at the cheese booth in the Dairy Products Building, to be picked up later by successful bidders.

Red Angus "Bulletin Board" A Proven Market For Breeders

DENTON, Texas — Commercial and purebred producers have found a new market for their quality Red Angus replacement females, through the use of the Red Angus marketing program's "Bulletin Board."

The Bulletin Board, which can be accessed at www.redangus.org, is designed to provide information on Red Angus-based replacement females that are for sale.

Established in February, the Bulletin Board has listed over 1,800 head of Red Angus females. The board provides an opportunity to purchase source-verified, high quality, replacement females.

Entirely Internet-based, the Bulletin Board is up-dated frequently to provide the most current information available. Producers list groups of females — regardless of size — free of charge by simply contacting the Red Angus Association of America.

Prospective buyers can view the board at their leisure for information on genetic background, health, and management of groups for sale. Ultimately, the it assists producers in receiving the full value of Red Angus females whether they are to be marketed through a sale barn, video auction, or private treaty.

To view females currently listed, go to the RAAA home page www.redangus.org and click on the "Bulletin Board" link.

If you would like to list females on the "Red Angus Bulletin Board", contact Sara Moyer or Ann Holsinger at 940-387-3502

Soybeans Can Reduce Ration Cost

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The use of soybeans as a protein source for dairy cattle can result in great cost savings. Doing so in certain rations may not decrease milk production, and may significantly increase profitability.

Different nutrition consultants seem to have differing points of view on this subject. Dwayne Splan, a nutrition consultant with Bay Lakes Cooperative, says, "There are differing schools of thought on protein. Most people try to limit the amount of vegetable fat to one pound per day. However, raising the amount of vegetable fats fed can be quite economical, if doing so significantly lowers the ration cost without large dips in milk volume."

Another nutrition consultant with Bay Lakes Cooperative, Carolyn Long, is a bit more cautious when recommending protein for the dairy ration. She says, "We must customize each ration for the needs of each farm. Variables that must be considered are forage quality, forage combinations, the total amino acid mix, as well as several others. Going to a cheaper mix may appear to save money, but if production falls too much it certainly wouldn't be worth the savings. If the total balanced ration isn't quite right, it may leave cows under their peak production. That effect would not be noticed for some time and it may take a long time to get production back up once the effect is noticed."

Dennis Zirbel, co-owner of a 250-cow dairy near Greenleaf, has seen great financial results. He says, "Two years ago, we built a 30-by-128-foot tower silo. Because we experienced so much less spoilage in the tower than the packed piles, we were able to plant (soy)beans and wheat on the saved acreage. We have now begun to use the beans to replace our protein supplements. This has reduced our ration cost to save us about $7,000 every month. We have yet to see our production fall off because of it.

"When I first suggested using the saved acreage to plant beans, the nutritionist advised us against using the beans in the ration. But, we have been feeding soybeans to cover the protein needs for over a year, and have not seen any adverse effects on the herd average."

Splan of Bay Lakes Cooperative explains, "At Bay Lakes we have been using a ration balancing program called AAMPS for about a year. It helps to give us insight into the protein aspect of the ration. We would likely use this system to identify the possible results of adding soybean to the ration. This program has aided us in helping farms of all sizes become more profitable.

It is clear that adding soybeans to a dairy ration may result in increased profits. However, in doing so each producer must check their individual ration to be certain that the decreased milk production would not offset the savings gained by using soybeans in the ration.

Rohrer Named Senior Relationship Manager

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — First Union announced that Roger M. Rohrer, a vice president in First Union's Pennsylvania/Delaware agri-finance department, was named a senior relationship manager.

Roger M. Rohrer

As senior relationship manager, Rohrer serves the financial needs of about 300 farm and agribusiness clients located throughout south central Pennsylvania and northern Maryland.

"I am pleased to announce this promotion," said Darvin Boyd, senior vice president and director of agri-finance. "Roger Rohrer's leadership has been vital to First Union's commitment and success with the agricultural industry over the past 16 years."

In 1986, Rohrer joined the agri-finance department of Hamilton Bank (a First Union predecessor bank) as a lending officer. Over the ensuing years, his portfolio of customers grew rapidly, and his accomplishments were recognized through promotions to assistant vice president and to vice president and relationship manager.

Rohrer serves as member and past chairman of the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and industry agricultural committee, and volunteers on various committees and memberships relating to agricultural issues. He recently served as the stewardship commission chairperson for the Neffsville Mennonite Church, and is past treasurer and board member of the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Association.

Born in Lancaster County, Rohrer is a graduate of Pequea Valley High School and attended Penn State University. With his son, Todd, he operates a 125-acre crop and poultry farm in Strasburg Township where he resides with his wife and three children.

In 1994, the Rohrer family was the recipient of the Pennsylvania Century Farm Award.

SCC Approves Nutrient Management Advisory Board Appointments

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At its recent meeting, the Pennsylvania State Conservation Commission (SCC) approved the reappointment of four members to the Act 6 Nutrient Management Advisory Board (NMAB) and the appointment of one member.

The 15-member NMAB reviews and makes recommendations to the commission on proposed regulations to carry out Pennsylvania's Act 6 Nutrient Management Act (Act 6). Members serve three-year terms. Appointments are staggered so that every year, a third of the board has completed a term.

Appointed to serve was Robert Jones of AgChoice Farm Credit, ACA, as the agricultural lender representative to the NMAB.

Four who were approved for reappointment include Jerry Ogline of Franklin County as a public representative; Dr. James Ferguson, University of Pennsylvania New Bolton Center, as a veterinary nutrition specialist; A. Carville Foster, York County, as a local government representative; and James Skinner, Union County, to serve as a meat/poultry producer.

The NMAB has been reviewing regulations for possible change, as required by law. Its next scheduled meeting is 9 a.m., Aug. 13, in Room 309 of the state Agriculture Building, Harrisburg.

For more information, contact Douglas Goodlander, director of the SCC Nutrient Management Program, at (717) 705-3895.

Montgomery County Hosts No-Till Demo

ELROY (Montgomery Co.) — Crop and vegetable farmers from the southeast region of Pennsylvania gathered between rain showers Wednesday, June 12th to take a look at various no-till equipment.

The group was able to watch pumpkins being planted into a rye cover crop that was killed and rolled prior to planting.

Also, pumpkins that were direct seeded with a four-row corn planter with no-till attachments 10 days prior to the event were emerging through the thick blanket of rye.

For the crop farmers, a six-row zone-till corn planter was demonstrated that has three coulters per row to till a six-inch band into which the seed is placed. Pumpkin plants were also transplanted with a no-till transplanter at the time of the meeting.

By no-tilling pumpkins into a rye cover a producer can lower production costs, produce cleaner pumpkins, reduce compaction, promote moisture conservation, control erosion, improve soil filth, improve harvest conditions, and increase soil organic matter without sacrificing yield, maturity, quality, and size.

To help encourage the use of this new agricultural technology, the Southeastern Pennsylvania Resource Conservation Development Council has purchased two, one row No-till Transplanters and is making them available to local farmers. Call SEPA RC&D at 215-541-7930 for more details.

W.Va. Joins Chesapeake Bay Program

MOOREFIELD, W.Va. — To better protect and restore local water quality in the Shenandoah and Potomac Rivers and the Chesapeake Bay, West Virginia Gov. Bob Wise officially committed the state as a "headwaters partner" in the Chesapeake Bay Program — the federal-state partnership directing the protection and restoration of America's largest estuary.

"With my signature on this memorandum, West Virginia officially becomes a partner at the table, joining the other states that have voluntarily agreed to maintain and protect the Potomac River watershed," said Wise. "Through this effort, we reaffirm our cooperative obligation to protect one of America's great natural treasures — the Chesapeake Bay."

At an afternoon signing ceremony at the Department of Agriculture's district office in Moorefield, Wise signed a Memorandum of Understanding committing the state to working with the Bay Program to improve water quality in the bay and its tributaries, as detailed in Chesapeake 2000, the baywide protection and restoration agreement signed in June 2000.

"West Virginia's involvement in bay restoration highlights the need for expanded partnerships between the bay states and their upstream neighbors to reduce the amount of nutrients and sediment flowing into the bay," said Donald S. Welsh, mid-Atlantic regional administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. "With West Virginia's assistance, we hope to improve the quality of the water flowing into the Shenandoah and Potomac Rivers, and further downstream into the Chesapeake Bay."

The Chesapeake Bay watershed covers 64,000 square miles including parts of West Virginia, New York, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Magee Introduces Agribioterrorist Bill In N.Y.

ALBANY, N.Y. — Assembly Agriculture Chair Bill Magee (D-Nelson) will be introducing a bill in the State Assembly that would create the crime of agribioterrorism as well as make it a class B felony to commit such a crime.

"Unfortunately, there are those out there that seek to decimate and destroy our free society," Magee said. "This bill simply seeks to recognize the great and unique significance of trying to do that through attacking our food supply."

The bill provides that a person would be found guilty of agribioterrorism when with intent to intimidate or coerce people or policy they knowingly create plants for human consumption that are toxic; intentionally introduce an animal virus or pathogen into livestock herds; or knowingly harm a food or farm product with the intent to injure or kill persons or animals.

"In many ways it is sad that we have to introduce legislation like this," Magee commented. "But we cannot take it for granted that some group may not try to strike fear and terror into people by poisoning their animals and food — simply put, our food is safe now we must ensure that it is secure."

"Our farmers produce our food and our farmers are an intricate and important part of our economy," Magee said.

Maryland DHIA Report For May

The May Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

*A = Ayrshire
*B = Br. Swiss
*G = Guernsey
*H = Holstein
*J = Jersey

Cedar Lane Farm

Milk 'n Honey Genetics
Oldwick, NJ

Host of this year's National Holstein Convention picnic

General Manager Howard Hoffman appreciates the 81x19 Slurrystore® System installed at Cedar Lane in 1999, the first green Slurrystore ever built. It puts him in control of the nutrient management program, allowing slurry to be applied to the fields at the most opportune time, balancing the nutrients needed for each field individually. Safety and expandability, along with a choice of colors, were major factors in Cedar Lane's choice of a Slurrystore System to manage waste.

BALEWRAPPER
TL5500A TL5500S TL6500A

The Tube-Line Balewrapper gives you the power of control. Everyone knows the biggest enemies to baling hay is time and weather. The Tube-Line Balewrapper helps eliminate your dependence on the weather, saves you time and ensures you get the best quality forage.

High quality feed can now be made with a low investment in equipment. Forage is cut, wilted, baled and wrapped air tight with the Tube-Line BAlewrapper. This eliminates the 2-4 days of drying time or expensive silo equipment.

Because the Tube-Line Balewrapper wraps the bales in a continuous line, only the outside circumference of each bale is wrapped. This saves up to 40% of the film used to wrap individual bales, and saves time when unwrapping. The Tube-Line Balewrapper also gives you hydraulic control of the film overlap letting you decide how much to protect your bales.

Time is the other enemy when trying to collect forage. The Tube-Line Balewrapper will wrap up to two bales per minute. And various options are available to match the speed of wrapping to your needs. This frees up your time and allows more time for forage growth. There is a Tube-Line Balewrapper available to fit your needs. From round to square, one Tube-Line Balewrapper is all you need.

Pennsylvania Ayrshire Princess Deals With The Worst, Best

LOU ANN GOOD

ENTRIKEN (Huntingdon Co.) — One of the best and worst days in Jodi Keith's life happened April 27. That was the day that her favorite cow died from a perforated rectum — and the day she was crowned Pennsylvania Ayrshire Princess.

The usually cheery 16-year-old was distraught from the death of her cow, but she pushed aside her emotions as she rushed from the family's farm in Entriken to participate in the princess contest at the State Ayrshire Convention, New Enterprise.

Flustered from the death of her favorite cow, Jodi believed her interview with the judges "went badly."

Jodi told her parents John and Cindy and siblings Stacie, 13, and Andy, 14, to forget about the possibility of her being selected as princess.

But Jodi dutifully completed the competition by answering an impromptu question on stage during the convention luncheon. Afterward, Jodi was shocked to hear her name called as the new Pennsylvania Ayrshire Princess.

The designation could not be more fitting. Jodi is a full-fledged Ayrshire advocate and is deeply involved in her family's dairy operation.

She daily feeds the calves while her dad and brother take care of milking parlor duties.

The Keith family have a 50-head herd of Holsteins. Ayrshires were not introduced to the herd until Jodi joined 4-H. In the beginning, Jodi's parents thought it appropriate that she show beef calves since the family's Holstein dairy herd had an abundance of bull calves. But that required selling the dairy projects after the shows. Although the money was designated to Jodi's college fund, the plan had a downside.

"After each show, we had to deal with buckets of tears," Jodi's mom said. "Because Jodi had become so attached to her projects, she couldn't bear parting with them."

The parents reevaluated their plan and decided it would be better for Jodi to raise animals that could be added to the herd to build equity instead of sold. Both parents had grown up showing animals. They knew the smaller-sized Ayrshires would be easier to handle than Holsteins. So they purchased an Ayrshire calf for Jodi.

Since then, more Ayrshires have been added for projects for Jodi's younger siblings Stacie and Andy. In addition, heifers have been bred and the herd size increased.

"But I seemed to have lots of bad luck with mine," Jodi said. In addition to bull calves, her Ayrshires have met some untimely fates.

Showing them also started off badly. The first year in 4-H competition, "Pixie" refused to walk, resulting in a bottom of the class placing. But the next year, Pixie took reserve junior champion at the Huntingdon Fair, 4-H Fair, and open show.

When the bovines becomes old enough to milk, the Keiths no longer take them to competition.

"Dad doesn't believe in taking milking animals to the fair," Jodi said of the potential for problems.

As experiencing both the bottom and top placings at fairs, Jodi is philosophical. She said, "Even if you're at the bottom, you still have the opportunity to work and train an animal. That accomplishment helps build self-esteem."

The Keiths' farm has been passed down through the generations from the Civil War. It is thought to be the first farm that was settled in the Huntingdon Valley. Family stories related that during the Civil War, four women and their children moved into the farm house while their husbands went off to war.

The log home has been recently remodeled, but the family lore continues.

"All I ever wanted to do was farm," Keith said of growing up on the farm with the rich heritage. His mother, a school teacher, pushed him to go to college in case farming didn't work out.

At Penn State, Keith studied ag economics and rural sociology because the school hadn't established a dairy science department at that time.

Following graduation in 1977, Keith returned to the family farm. Within the year, he increased his father's herd from 22 head to about 50. In 1985, he begin renting additional ground totally 400 acres. He put up an

Getting an early start on the intricacies of cherry picking is 2-year-old Tristan, held by his grandfather Richard Haas, who purchased Cherry Hill Orchards in 1970. Haas recently transferred ownership to his son Tom.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Cherry Picking Season Opens

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Cherry picking season in Lancaster County opened June 12 and is expected to run for two to three weeks.

Plump, perfect cherries hung in abundant clumps at Cherry Hill Orchards, Long Lane on Marticville Road, where a pick-your-own cherry operation attracts hundreds of families.

It's one of the best seasons ever, according to Richard Haas, whose family has operated the orchard since 1970. An early spring frost thinned out the blossoms, resulting in larger and better flavored fruit.

Cherry Hill has more than 25 varieties of sweet cherries on 60 acres and 5 acres of sour cherries. A Pennsylvania survey showed that Cherry Hill produces 20 percent of all sweet cherries in the state and is also listed as the state's largest sweet cherry orchard.

Pick-it-yourselfers are free to pick wherever they prefer in the acres of orchards.

Haas said when he took over the operation, customers were assigned to one tree and were expected to thoroughly pick it.

"I got an ulcer trying to enforce that rule," Haas said.

So he relaxed the rules and things have turned out much better for everyone. The customer chooses what he or she thinks is best. The cherries left behind ripen into even bigger and sweeter fruit because the trees are less stressed.

Over the years, orchard growing has changed. Trees are smaller, making them easier to pick. Although many dwarf varieties are planted, the older, mature trees, mostly planted in 1977, are topped to keep them from growing too tall.

Recently, 1,400 special ladders replaced the tall, unwieldy wooden ones.

New stock planted is one-year-old trees about the diameter of Haas's smallest finger. The trees

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

It's official.

Summer's here.

You, of course, had figured that out days ago, when the thermometer was blasting to the mid-90s and the humidity thick enough to curl a long-haired dog into an oversized poodle.

Even if temps and humidity hadn't given it away, summer's clues are right there at the end of our noses. Every season has its unique fragrances: the damp, moist earth of early March, October's burning leaves, the sharp, clean scent of the first snow. Summer has its own specialties as well.

Few things shout more of the summer solstice than the sweet, musky fragrance of a field of new-mown hay. Logic says that hay is grass and thus would smell like a newly-mown lawn. But, it doesn't, perhaps because of the blends of forage plants. It smells like...well, hay.

Haymaking is a satisfying kind of farming chore, one where every step shows accomplishment. A well-grown field of hay is in itself a thing of visual beauty, evenly green, stalks of alfalfa or clover or grasses waving in the breeze. Each pass with a mowing machine lays down even, wide strips of dark green, vivid contrast to the light underbelly of the field laid bare. Stalks fall neatly in the same direction, the aroma of the cut stems going airborne as the grass instantly begins to wilt and dry.

Hay tedders and turners may follow, to hasten drying by moving the swath of green. Rakes blend multiple rows into field-shaped geometric designs, in final preparation for gobbling up by forage harvesters or balers, and again stir the aroma of drying forages into the breeze. A hay-mow stacked full with well-made bales has its own scent, too, dried-grass packages fragrant in afternoon warmth compounded under a sun-splashed, metal barn roof.

Curing hay silage adds another scent to the breeze, a distinctive fermenting aroma enticing to cows and pleasing to farmers. Extended periods of bad weather on mown hay cause quick deterioration, the results a possible turn-off to not only the discriminating palates of cows, but less pleasing to our own noses.

Walking across the lawn on a recent sultry day, a light breeze flung across the yard the heady perfume of roses. A bed of end-of-season-sale roses purchased by The Farmer in recent years have matured into bushes laden with heavenly June color and fragrance. While it's been said that "a rose is a rose is a rose," I disagree. Roses vary, each having not only a distinctive color and shape, but also its own nuance of rose scent.

Burying one's nose deep into their petals to sample their fragrances is a bit like being a beverage taster. One should cleanse the palate, so to speak, between each variety. Maybe with a handful of fresh-mown hay.

The roses' delightful fragrance goes a long way toward earning forgiveness for their briary bushes, which find some way to rip my fingers every time I reach in — no matter how carefully — to yank out a weed. Some of them sport virtual suits of jagged armor all up and down their tough stems.

A somewhat dusty-warm smell in this time of late June rises from maturing of grain crops, as combines lumber into wheat and barley fields to thresh out the kernels and spit the straw out in shiny windrows. Grains and their straw have a lighter, less distinctive aroma than hay, but a definite one all their own. A barn-y smell, perhaps?

But hay and grain and roses all somewhat owe their scents to that of a less poetic, but vital seasonal aroma. Step outside on a damp morning after a rain. Can you smell the earthworms?

I read recently that an acre of rich, organic soil may have a half-million earthworms busy burrowing and tunneling through it, loosening and aerating the soil while enriching it further with worm castings, or manure. The richest soil generally has the best worms, plugging away endlessly, unseen, to do their part to improve the earth.

While fisherman snag them for bait, I find myself scouring the pavement after a rain for worm "strays" tucking them into the flower beds or a compost pile, where they can go to work enriching more soil. Otherwise, they become bird food as they dry and shrivel up under the hot sun.

That seems to make much better "scents" than having them rot out in the sun.

So, please do your part. After the next rainfall, save an earthworm.

Help make the world a sweeter place.

Father Makes Home Run

It's the bottom of the ninth inning with two outs and the batter has a full count. Billy hugs second base and Janet is rooted on third. Billy and Janet watch dad inside the batter's box. He grips the bat and firmly plants his feet waiting for the pitch. The pitcher lets the ball fly, dad swings and...dad is expected to knock the ball out of the park, thus winning the game and becoming the hero.

Is that a fair and realistic image for fathers and their role in the family? If the role of super hero is what we expect from fathers, it could lead to feelings of guilt and confusion.

Today, the image of dad is changing from that of the solitary breadwinner that comes home at the end of the day to hide behind the newspaper or become engrossed in the television. He is freeing himself of the old stereotype to take on a more involved role in the life of his children. Dad is discovering what research has concluded: the role of father has a profound influence on the social, emotional, and intellectual development of his children.

According to Ann K. Smith, Ph.D., Ohio State Cooperative Extension. "Fathers have an important impact on their children from infancy through adulthood. One researcher concludes that fathers who are more involved in infant caregiving have infants with greater cognitive development at one year of age than fathers who are less involved in infant care giving. Infants can distinguish fathers from other adults early. Another investigator reported that fathers who were very involved with their preschool children helped foster their verbal ability. One study on parenting skills with adolescents noted that adolescents need firm guidance followed by explanations and reasons for that guidance."

Research findings document the importance of the father's influence on their children in the areas of self-esteem and school achievement. One father reports being affectionate with his children.

Andrew says, "My greatest thrill is coming home at the end of the day to have my daughters throw their arms around me for a group hug. When they were babies and toddlers they would curl up on my lap, and we would read their favorite book...over and over again."

Another dad shared his favorite activity was brushing and combing his son's hair. It was an activity that help them both to unwind. Sharing time and affection with children contributes positively to their self-esteem.

Researchers report that fathers who value education have children who do better in school than those fathers who do not value education. One investigator reported a relationship of children's reading levels to the amount they saw their fathers reading in the home. Thus, the father can have an influence on the level of importance of education for sons and daughters.

Each father is a unique person who parents in his own style, yet there are some characteristics that caring fathers have in common.

Caring fathers are involved in the lives of their children. Jason says, "My work keeps me on the road, yet whenever I'm home I make every effort to attend their parent-teacher conferences, school plays, and soccer games. The kids like to go with me when I take the car to have it serviced. It's a great way for them to learn about adult responsibilities."

Caring fathers expect a great deal from children, but also accept and support the unique individuals their children are becoming. They acknowledge each child and are never ashamed of the children.

Caring fathers set limits and are firm. According to Andrew, "I try to set realistic expectations for my three children. We talk about the rules and they know what will happen if they break the rules. I try to be realistic. I know they will break a rule sometime. I try to hear their side of the story before I discipline them."

Caring fathers spend time with their children. They realize that their time with children is really an investment in them. Taking time for the child when the child needs that time will be much more important than taking time for the child when it is convenient for the father.

Being an involved father has a profound influence in their children's growth and development, it is the way to make a home run.

Game Booths Wanted For Montgomery County 4-H Fair

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — Local community service organizations, home and school groups, and other nonprofits are invited to participate in the Montgomery County 4-H Fair by setting up a game booth during the 4-H Fair. The 4-H Fair is scheduled for Aug. 8-10 at the 4-H Center, located on Route 113 near Skippack.

The 4-H Fair is family-oriented, non-commercial, and attended by approximately 5,000 people over the three days. 4-H would like to offer community groups the opportunity to make money for their organization and at the same time, add additional entertainment for families at the Fair. The group is asked to make a small donation to the 4-H program, to help offset the costs of the Fair.

Organizations may charge a nominal fee to play their game and keep the profits. The game must be family-oriented (no betting), award small prizes for winners, and must be pre-approved by the 4-H staff. No individual entrepreneurs may participate and no food may be sold — strictly games.

All of the game booths will be outdoors and must have their own table, chairs and any other needed equipment. Groups are welcome to put up a sign to advertise their organization and the name of the game. Electricity will not be available, but there will be adequate lighting in the evening. The hours for game booth operation are: Thursday, 7-9 p.m.; Friday, 11 a.m.-9 p.m.; Saturday, 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m.

Raechel Kilgore Crowned York Dairy Princess

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

BAIR (York Co.) — From drill sergeants to singing puppets, York County's annual dairy princess pageant showcased a wealth of talented and enthusiastic young women primed to tell the world about their favorite beverage, milk.

Heading up the promotion team's efforts will be Raechel Kilgore, crowned the 2002-2003 county princess as the finale of the June 8 pageant at the 4-H Center.

Raechel, 17, is the daughter of Pam and Doug Kilgore, Airville. The Kilgore family milks 50 head of Holstein cows and raises forage and grain crops on their McCalls Ferry Farm.

An accomplished public speaker, Raechel presented a speech outlining the history and nutritive benefits of milk and dairy products. She reappeared a bit later in the program dressed from head to toe in military camo garb as Colonel Calcium, presenting a snappy, game-plan strategy to the troops she was uniting to do battle against bad nutrition information. Assisting Colonel Calcium were Privates Potassium, Riboflavin, and Calcium.

Raechel is a senior at Red Lion Area High School with plans to pursue a communications major in college. She has been a 4-H and FFA dairy exhibitor and judging team member for several years and earned the national 4-H dairy judging title last year at the World Dairy Expo. Previously, Raechel served with as a member of the dairy promotion group for two years as a dairy miss, followed by a year as a dairy ambassador.

Dairy Ambassador Heather Baumgardner also returns to the promotion team with several years as a dairy miss. Heather, 18, is the daughter of Dan and Lori Baumgardner, Dillsburg. She is a home-school graduate, employed on the family dairy farm, and is spending her summer in youth missionary-outreach work with Bible school programs in the region.

Speaking on the "fruits of farming," Heather cited how the biblical fruits of the spirit apply to dairying. She cited the love of the family working together, the joy of newborn calves, peacefulness on the farm "most of the time," farmers' need for endless patience, and related attributes of kindness, goodness, gentleness and self-control "when everything is going wrong."

Heather also presented an original puppet show, featuring a hip rock singer belting out the song "Milk's Good For Your Bones."

Dairy Ambassador Lisa Jones, 15, is the daughter of Dennis Jones and Patty Greek, Delta. A 4-H dairy exhibitor and owner of Brown Swiss and Holstein animals, Lisa also exhibits draft horses.

A newcomer to the dairy promotion team, Lisa quizzed the audience during her speech presentation on how they choose snack foods. She noted lots of alternatives to mostly nutrition-empty junk foods and suggested selecting dairy alternatives, including yogurt, cheese, and ice cream.

With blanket and baby doll, Lisa portrayed a mother putting her little girl to bed with a bedtime chat about milk and good health.

Amanda Hoover, 14, will help promote the industry as a dairy maid. She is the daughter of Paul and Rose Hoover, whose family milks dairy goats at their East Prospect farm. A freshman at Eastern Middle School, Amanda has assisted with the promotion team for several years, along with tending to her 4-H projects in swine and berries.

Her promotion presentation advised listeners to "get hooked on milk for life," since milk and dairy products help prevent numerous health problems.

Four dairy misses will assist with promotion efforts as well. They include Jelee Anstine, Amy Baumgardner, Katie Baumgardner, and Carlyn Crowl. Each recited an original poem for their audience presentation.

Jelee Anstine, 10, is the daughter of Lynn Hibbard and Charles Anstine, York. She is a fifth-grade student at Sinking Springs Elementary School and has previously been a dairy miss and lil' miss. Carlyn Crowl, 10, is the daughter of Gary and Melanie Crowl, Delta. A fifth-grade student at Clearview Elementary School, Carlyn is a 4-H dairy club member and serving her second year with the dairy promotion program.

Amber Thoman, 8, is the daughter of Gail and Gary Thoman, Dallastown. She is a Loganville Elementary School second grader, a 4-H dairy club member, and has helped with promotion as a dairy maid and lil' miss.

Sisters Amy and Katie Baumgardener are the daughters of Dan and Lori Baumgardner, Dillsburg. Amy, 11, is a home-schooled fifth-grader. In the four years she has helped with milk promotion, Amy has been a dairy maid and lil' miss. Katie, 7, is a home-schooled second grader. She has previously been a lil' dairy miss. Both are members of the Central 4-H Dairy Club.

Selected as a lil' dairy miss was 4-year-old Rebekah Baumgardner, daughter of Dan and Lori Baumgardner, Dillsburg. Like her sisters, "Bekah" enjoys helping with the family's dairy herd, but her favorite animals are the barn cats and kittens.

In her farewell, outgoing princess Michelle Walker told the incoming promotion team that their activities and experiences will be building blocks of experience for their lives. She expressed the hope that those she came in contact with took her advice to use dairy products for good nutrition and a healthier life.

April Daugherty, who served as dairy ambassador, emphasized how great a privilege it is to be dairy "royalty" and the need to remain aware of the responsibilities that come with that opportunity.

Organizations interested in having the York County dairy princess or the promotion team be a part of their activity may contact coordinators Heather Crowl, (717) 862-3955 or Lori Baumgardner, (717) 432-3169.

Raechel Kilgore, York County dairy princess, is joined by her parents, Pam and Doug Kilgore.

Until then, enjoy these udderly wonderful recipes celebrating dairy's goodness.

My husband Daniel, our son Zachary and I live on a farm in Mount Wolf. We really enjoy reading the Lancaster Farming. I love cooking and baking for my family, and also trying new recipes for them. I'm thankful that Lancaster Farming has a recipe column.

WHOOPIE PIE CAKE

Cake:
18-ounce package chocolate or red velvet cake mix
¼ cup oil
4 eggs
3.4-ounce package instant chocolate pudding
1¼ cup milk

Divide cake batter into two 9x13-inch pans lined with wax paper. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Cool. Cake layers can also be frozen for easier handling.

Filling:
1 cup sugar
3.4-ounce package instant vanilla pudding
1 cup milk
1 cup crisco shortening (generic brands sometimes don't work as well)

Beat approximately 10 minutes, or until sugar is dissolved and filling is fluffy. Spread between cake layers.

This recipe is a family favorite. It's hard to stop at just one piece! The filling isn't as sweet as frosting usually is. My sister-in-law likes this cake so much, she made it for her wedding last summer.

PARTY MASHED POTATOES

5 pounds or nine large potatoes
8-ounce package cream cheese
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 teaspoons onion salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter

Peel potatoes, cut in pieces, and boil in salted water. When tender, mash. Add remaining ingredients; beat until light and fluffy. Cool. Spread in buttered 9x13-inch baking dish. Cover and refrigerate. To bake, dot with butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 45-60 minutes or until potatoes are heated through. Garnish with paprika and chopped parsley.

We are a dairy family who live in Wales, Maine. We have been farming for 17 years and now all our children are grown up and live on their own. I am a registered nurse and work away from the farm but help with the paperwork. My husband still farms, although since he is farming alone he has cut back recently. We love the country and enjoy reading Lancaster Farming, as we both were originally from that area.

CHERRY-TOPPED CHEESECAKE

1 package yellow cake mix
2 tablespoons oil
16 ounces cream cheese, softened
½ cup sugar
4 eggs
1½ cups milk
3 tablespoons lemon juice
3 teaspoons vanilla
1-pound 5-ounce can cherry pie filling

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Reserve 1 cup dry cake mix. In large bowl, combine remaining cake mix, 1 egg, and oil (mixture will be crumbly). Press crust mixture evenly into bottom and ¾ way up the sides of a greased 9x13-inch pan. In same bowl, blend cream cheese and sugar. Add 3 eggs and reserved cake mix; beat one minute at medium speed. At low speed, slowly, add milk and flavorings. Mix until smooth. Pour into crust. Bake at 300 degrees for 45-55 minutes until center is firm.

Top with filling. Store in refrigerator.

I am a farm wife from Franklin County with four children ages 26, 23, 20, and 17. We were a dairy operation, milking approximately 60 cows until five years ago. We sold the cows and took jobs off the farm.

I am the baker and assistant cook at our local school. My husband works for a local contractor installing swimming pools. We continue to farm 140 acres, making hay and growing corn, and also raising some steers and heifers.

Farming is a great way of life, and a wonderful life for children.

Honey-Nut Breakfast Twists

1 package (¼-ounce) active dry yeast
¼ cup warm water
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter, melted
1 cup sour cream
1 egg
2½-3 cups all-pupose flour

Glaze:

⅓ cup packed brown sugar
3 tablespoons butter, melted
3 tablespoons honey, warmed
3 tablespoons heavy cream

Filling:

⅓ cup butter, softened
¼ cup finely chopped nuts
¼ cup honey

In a mixing bowl, combine yeast and water. Let stand 5 minutes. Stir in sugar, salt, and butter. Add sour cream and egg, beat until smooth. Add 1½ cups flour, beat at low speed until moistened. Beat 3 minutes at medium speed, scraping the bowl twice. By hand, stir in enough flour to make a soft dough. Turn onto a floured surface, knead until smooth and elastic, about 5 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning once to grease top. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled, about one hour.

Combine glaze evenly in 9x13x2-inch baking dish. Set aside. Punch down dough. Roll out in a 9x24-inch rectangle. Combine filling ingredients. Spread over dough. Fold dough lengthwise into six 9x2-inch pieces. Twist each piece loosely and place over glaze in baking dish. Cover and let rise until doubled, about one hour. Bake at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes or until golden brown. Invert pan to a large platter. Let set one minute before removing. Serve warm or refrigerate overnight. Yields: 6 servings.

Oriental Chicken Salad

Dressing:

3 tablespoons honey
1½ tablespoons rice wine vinegar
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
⅛ teaspoon sesame oil

Salad:

1 egg
½ cup milk
½ cup flour
½ cup corn flake crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 boneless, skinless chicken breast half
2-4 cups vegetable oil (for frying)
3 cups chopped romaine lettuce
1 cup red cabbage
1 cup Napa cabbage
1 carrot, shredded
1 green onion, chopped
1 tablespoon sliced almonds
⅓ cup chow mein noodles

Preheat oil in deep fryer or deep pan over medium heat to 350 degrees.

Blend together all ingredients for dressing in a small bowl with an electric mixer. Put dressing in refrigerator to chill while you prepare salad.

In small, shallow bowl, beat egg, add milk, and mix well.

In another bowl, combine flour with corn flake crumbs, salt and pepper. Cut chicken breast into 4 to 5 long strips. Dip each strip of chicken first into egg mixture then into flour mixture, coating each piece completely.

Fry each chicken finger for 5 minutes or until coating has darkened to brown. Prepare salad by tossing the chopped romaine with the chopped red cabbage, Napa cabbage, and carrots.

Sprinkle sliced green onion on top of lettuce.

Sprinkle almonds over the salad, then chow mein noodles.

Cut chicken into small bite-sized chunks. Place the chicken onto the salad forming a pile in the middle. Serve with salad dressing on the side. Makes one dinner-size salad.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

When you get older, it seems that the mailman's arrival becomes more important. Maybe it is because one has more time to sit down and read the newspaper. Our mail arrives anytime between 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. That is quite a difference, and sometimes we think they forgot about us.

It is not just the mailman that cannot be depended on, it is also general delivery. A while back a letter was returned to me a week after I mailed it to a local address. I'd forgotten to put a stamp on the envelope as usually the bank gave stamped envelopes, but I didn't notice the change. I was so glad that it did not contain payment for a credit card as then I would have had to pay extra for a late payment.

Several of my birthday cards came the week after they were mailed. Two cards mailed at the same time in the same box arrived four days apart. Sometimes it is amazing to look at the postmarks and see where the letter has traveled on its way here.

Have you noticed the methods used to get the public to buy more of a company's product? Sometimes the box of a particular product will be an ounce or two less than previous boxes — but you pay the same price. Or, a soap product will contain a very large plastic scoop to measure the powder. Previously the measuring scoop was small and that is when I began to throw away the large one. They hope we'll use more and buy more.

Due to the dry summer last year I am only picking quite small strawberries this year. But, it still takes a lot of time to go over the patch. I think that I'll be picking sugar peas into August as many of them were chewed off a few inches from the ground and are only now starting to bloom.

Everyone Finds Fun At Family Farm Days

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — As part of June Dairy Month festivities, Oregon Dairy, Lancaster, hosted Family Farm Days, an annual event presented by the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce.

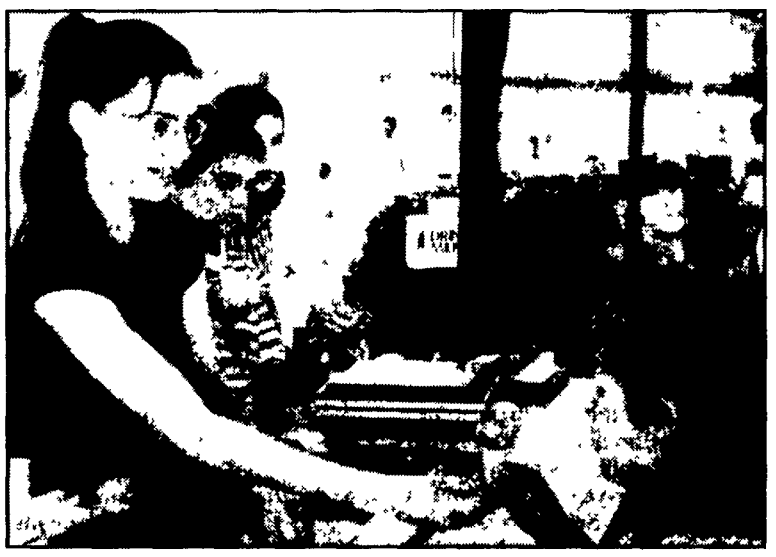
The three-day event featured a wagon ride tour of the Oregon Dairy farm, agricultural exhibits, and ice cream and milk samples.

A straw tunnel, pony rides, and a scavenger hunt were also part of Family Farm Days.

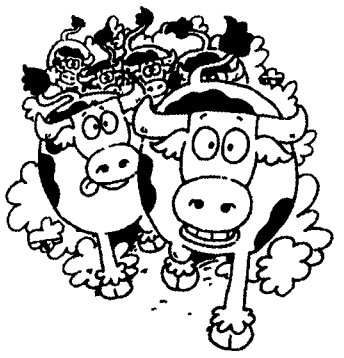
In addition, the Lancaster County Conservation District set up a conservation exhibit to give conservation tips. Visitors also had the opportunity to participate in a stream study and examine a soil profile.

Oregon Dairy began as a small store in 1974, marketing milk from the farm. It is now a large supermarket and includes 600 acres of land. They milk about 300 cows.

Daniel Walters, 6, a missionary from Africa on furlough and living in Ephrata, helps himself to a chocolate milk sample



Andrea Peters, Manheim, hands an ice cream sample to Danielle Barlieb, 7, Lancaster.



Hannah Breneman, 9, Washington Boro, and Candice Brubaker, 11, Manheim, did their part to promote the dairy industry during the event by handing out "got milk" items.

At left Shalane Heisey, Rexville, N.Y., puts a temporary tattoo bearing a beef promotion message on Preston Chakara, 8, Ephrata. Heisey is a summer intern for the Pennsylvania Beef Council

Knute Weber, 7, New Holland, made several trips through the straw tunnel several times during his visit to the farm.

David Trump, 7, Lititz, participates in the scavenger hunt. The game asked agriculturally-related questions about the events and displays at Family Farm Days. Children who finished the hunt were rewarded with an ice cream sundae.

Alison, 7, and Jenessa Stark, 4, Perkiomenville, enjoyed meeting a calf during Family Farm Days.

4-H HAPPENINGS

York County 4-H Berries And Bees Club

The York County 4-H Berries and Bees Club conducted their annual strawberry roundup, June 4 at the 4-H Center located in Bair.

Starting at 6:30 p.m. with berry and honey treats for everyone, the 4-H members exhibited strawberries and other plants to be judged for placing.

The results were given and comments were made by the judge, John Smith. The results follow:

Homegrown strawberries — Grand champion: Matt Cardenuto from Fawn Grove. Reserve champion: Randy Shoemaker from Windsor. 3. Brittany Shoemaker from Windsor.

Montgomery County 4-H Theatre Day Camp

The Montgomery County "4-H Theatre Day Camp" will be conducted from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, July 24-26, at the 4-H Center in Creamery.

All Montgomery County youth ages 9-14 (as of January 1, 2002) are invited to participate in this unique opportunity. Campers will gain knowledge of many of the facets of theatre such as basic acting skills, stage make-up tips, and exploring various careers in theatre arts, plus have a final performance opportunity at the annual 4-H Fair in August.

There will also be guest speakers plus an optional field trip to an area theatrical performance. Cost for the camp is $25 per child.

Previous 4-H membership and/or acting experience are not required to attend day camp, just a desire to learn and have fun with other youth who enjoy theatre. For additional information or to request a brochure for registration, contact Laura Rittenhouse, 4-H summer assistant, at the 4-H Center at (610) 489-4315. Registration can also be done at the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office, located on Route 113, near Skippack, between Routes 29 and 73. Business hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

North Mountain 4-H Market Goat Club

The last meeting of the North Mountain Goat Club was Sunday, May 19. Anji Reifsnyder and Kate Gerber did a presentation on fitting. Kate and Anji went over how to shave the goat, cleaning out the goat's ears, painting goat hooves and other things that the judge will look for. Kyle Allen, Cassie Beakler, and Danielle Bates did a presentation on why they joined the goat club.

June 2 at the Dresch Farm, there were two presentations given by members. Katie Eckert and Kate Gerber did their presentation on why they chose to raise a market goat. Doug and Travis Dresch did their presentation on clipping the entire goat for the fair.

Doug and Travis stated that if you clip a goat for the fair, the goat's hair will grow back shinier and it will look nicer. They also stressed that when you clip the goat you need to get the littlest details such as ears, around the face, hooves, and its belly. Doug and Travis said that depending how your goat is clipped could place you first or second.

Jo Lynn Brummer is the ham and chicken barbecue chairperson for the fair. Those interested should see her.

additional silo, built onto the barn, and added a larger milking parlor.

The family farm is surrounded by mountainous peaks and is within a mile of the popular recreational man-built Raystown Lake.

"I guess the lake is necessary because recreation is a big part of the economy, but it has brought nothing but aggravation for us," Keith said.

While transporting equipment from farm to farm, Keith said he has been spit on, hollered at, swore at, and cut off the road by drivers of recreational vehicles who think they own the road.

Keith said it's difficult to survive as a small family farm, but is reluctant to expand. He believes that larger farms lend to a "surplus."

The farm enables them to carry on the tradition of not only raising produce for themselves but for others. They raise and freeze 100 quarts of corn for themselves and another 100 for church and Grange usage. The corn is boiled over a propane burner. Wire baskets filled with the blanched corn is set in the farm's spring to cool before being cut off the cob.

The farm spring also supplies water to half the town of Entriken.

A junior at Huntingdon Area School, Jodi participates in girls' soccer, track and field, FFA, band, chorus, and Key Club. She is active in both county and dairy club 4-H. She is active in Grange, church youth group activities, and enjoys movies and meeting new people.

Jodi is considering attending a technical school to study radiology.

During the summer months, Jodi earns money babysitting.

In addition to her duties as Ayrshire Princess, Jodi is also an ambassador for the dairy princess promotional program in Huntingdon County.

Jodi is eager to promote Ayrshires and wants people to call her if they want an Ayrshire princess to help with events. Call (814) 658-3232 or e-mail farmergirl—34+Ahotmail.com are planted from 8-15 feet apart, depending on the root stock.

Cherry Picking Season Opens

Trees are planted on the top of a hill which protects them from frost. This often exposes them to heavy winds that blow them over and require restaking. Each year, about the first week of April, 200 colonies of bees are brought in for pollination.

Cherries on the east and south sides ripen from 5 to 10 days earlier than those facing the north.

Variables that haunt orchard growers include winter freeze, spring frost, insects, disease, deer, bird, hail, rain at harvest, and competition.

"We grow enough for the birds and people," Haas said of the useless and endless methods used to deter birds.

Deer damage can be extensive. Woodland edges the orchards and deer love to strip the trees of all leaves and blossoms. Recently the orchard invested $10,000 in placing an invisible fence around the orchard and purchasing two Siberian Huskies to patrol the area at night.

Recently Haas turned the orchards over to his son Tom Haas.

Cherry Hill Orchards Outlet is located at Long Lane on Marticville Road, Lancaster. Hours are 7 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and Saturday 7 a.m.-4 p.m. The orchards are closed Sunday. For more information, call (717) 872-9311.

The cherry harvest is ahead by about 10 days this year. Cherries are plentiful, flavorful, and larger than usual. Allan Carr, left, Middletown, said it took him only 1½ hours to pick these cherries. Richard Haas of Cherry Hill Orchards weighs them.

Chester County Dairy Royalty To Be Crowned

CHESTER SPRINGS (Chester Co.) — Chester County ranks fifth in the state of Pennsylvania for milk production. This year the new Chester County dairy princess and five dairy ambassadors will be promoting milk to those living in this area.

The Chester County Dairy Princess Pageant will be Sunday, June 30, at 2:30 p.m. at the Chester Springs Creamery overlooking the Milky Way Farm of Chester Springs. The public is invited to attend.

Preparing for her new role as Chester County dairy princess is 19-year-old Elizabeth Young, known to her friends as Betsy. She is the daughter of Charles and Debra Young of West Grove. She works on the family owned "Pure AYR Farm" with a milking herd size of 95 Ayrshire and Brown Swiss milked twice daily. In her free time, Betsy enjoys reading, drawing, and painting.

Serving as dairy ambassadors this year are five young women who will be assisting Betsy in her duties visiting schools, stores, farm functions, various civic groups and attending training seminars. Rebecca Olan, known to family and friends as Becky, is the 16-year-old daughter of Rob and Sharon Nolan of Cochranville.

Having three older brothers, Becky has learned to handle herself in most situations and it has given her the stamina she needs to work with the family's "Dreamnol" herd of 35 Ayrshire and Holsteins. She attends Octorara Area High School, where she will enter her senior year this fall.

Patricia Harrop, or Trish, is the 14-year-old daughter of Bruce and Betsy Harrop of Exton. Trish helps on her parents' farm where mostly Holstein, three Jerseys, and an Ayrshire are milked. She also cares for her own four dairy cows. She attends Downingtown Area School and will enter grade nine.

Christy Guest is the 16-year-old daughter of Stan and Cathy Guest of Pottstown. This active teen is a member of the dairy 4-H club and shows her own dairy animals, which are part of the family's 160-head dairy. She attends Owen J. Roberts High School and will enter her junior year this fall.

Becky Bailey is the 15-year-old daughter of Baynard and Jane Bailey of West Chester. She attends Unionville Area High School. Along with the Holstein cows, a unique breed of cows grace the Bailey meadows. The name, Lineback, helps to identify their characteristics. Becky shows her dairy cows at the various 4-H and dairy events.

Abby Hedrick, Pottstown, is the 16-year-old daughter of Ruth and Jon Hedrick. She helps to care for the Ayrshire and Holstein dairy cows of a local farmer, where her own four dairy animals are housed when she is not showing them at 4-H shows. Abby attends Owen J. Roberts High School and will be entering 11th grade.

Blooming Where Planted

Start Roses With Cuttings

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

DILLSBURG (York Co.) — Dottie Beshore blooms where planted. And almost everything she touches blooms where she puts it.

Eleven years ago, Dottie Beshore moved into a row apartment with a barren outdoor yard stuck between two gravel lots.

Today her little "Garden of Eden" is proof-positive that it doesn't require a lot of money or ideal growing conditions to have a showcase garden.

A self-described "Flower Person," Dottie has more than 60 varieties of roses, 11 varieties of lilacs, 15 varieties of irises, and a bountiful collection of herbs, daylilies, boxwood, orchids, begonias, African gardenias, and other perennials thriving in her back yard.

The most amazing fact about her colorful blooms is that she started the plants with cuttings — not roots — and not store-purchased.

Instead friends and acquaintances allow her to break off several inches of a branch. She simply dips the end in root tone, sticks it in soil, covers it with a cut-off 2-liter plastic bottle, and watches for the first sign of new life — ususually a tiny green leaf pushing through the soil about 3-8 weeks after planted. She begins the cuttings in a shaded spot and transplants them later. Although gardeners will insist that roses be planted in full sun, much of Dottie's gardens are shaded from tall trees.

"Sometimes people ask me, 'How can your roses bloom so nicely when they're tightly planted and near trees (which takes the water from roses)?' I tell them this is the only spot I have. They (the roses) know they need to bloom (for me) and they do."

The transformation of the formerly barren lot stuck in the middle of town is alive with wildlife also, birds, squirrels, rabbits and chipmunks feed among her flower beds.

"It's a little oasis between two places with no yard," Dottie explains. "Each year I expand a little farther.

In addition to planting inground, Dottie likes container gardening, which enables her to move things around. She even has an 11-year-old lilac bush, much taller than her, growing in a pot.

"I always dreamed of having a rose garden. I thought I'd have hybrid roses but it didn't turn out that way."

Dottie speaks of her roses with awe and respect as she talks about the old-fashioned roses having survived droughts, thickets, and weeds. You can often find a brave flowering rose bush blooming among the remains of an old abandoned house or crumbling stone wall. Everything else is in desrepair but the beauty of the rose endures.

"I could go to the greenhouse and purchase a rose bush," Dottie admits, "but the thrill of starting my own from an old-fashioned one is much more exciting than buying one. It's like starting a new life."

She experienced that first thrill when she was only seven and planted some flowers in her grandmother's old cake pan.

Neither her mother nor her grandmother had a houseplant, but Dottie started growing African violets when she was 11. She started them with a leaf from a neighbor.

"I remember the feeling just like it was yesterday," Dottie said of seeing the first little leaf sprouting new growth.

As a teen-ager, Dottie entered the many African violets in a local fair and received many blue ribbons for them.

Dottie said that when planting rose cuttings, nip off all buds or blooms. Roses can't bloom and set roots at the same time.

Sometimes she sticks the cuttings in her garden and sometimes in a pot.

"I prefer a pot, because you can pick it up and look at the bottom. If you see roots pushing out the bottom holes, you know you've got a healthy plant."

She sometimes waits one year before transplanting the potted roses to a permanent site in her flower bed.

It doesn't matter what time of the year the cuttings are planted according to Dottie. During the winter, roses go dormant. She sticks the pot beneath the soil. The plastic liter bottle helps to protect the cutting, and in the spring new growth bursts forth.

"Don't be alarmed if some of the leaves turn black and drop off. Soon little green shoots will appear."

Dottie started a few of her roses from seed—the rose hip.

The old-fashioned roses require little care compared to the newer hybrids. Dottie feeds them a liquid fish emulsion several times during the summer and sprays them in early spring to control aphids and black spot.

Dottie Beshore's garden blooms with 60 varieties of roses, 11 of lilacs, 15 of irises, and numerous other perennials that she started with cuttings. Her little Garden of Eden is proof-positive that it doesn't require a lot of money or ideal growing conditions to nurture a showcase garden.

If bushes become too tall, Dottie prunes them back. She said large rose bushes can be transplanted if they are trimmed back considerably to enable easier handling.

One of Dottie's favorite roses is a cutting she took from the rose bush planted on her great grandmother's grave.

"Imagine," Dottie said as she inhaled its sweet aroma, "This rose is at least 150 years old."

Years ago, it was a common tradition for people to plant rose bushes on the gravesite of a loved one. In recent years, many cemeteries mow or spray the grounds, and this has eliminated many old rose varieties. One time a relative asked Dottie to start a shoot from a child's grave dated 1830.

"Every rose has a story," Dottie said. She has a Harrison yellow semi-double bloom that was first identified in 1850 in New York state. That variety can be found across the U.S. and is believed to have been transported by pioneers traveling West to homestead new lands.

Dottie keeps a rose journal in which she records where and when she found each rose variety, where she planted it and how it has thrived. Although she peruses a rose identification guide, she is unable to name several of the old varieties but she can tell you their habits. "This one will bloom again this season if I cut off the old blooms" or "this has apple-scented leaves after a rain."

In her journal, Dottie gives thanks for the many people who have given her cuttings and to her husband Frank who takes her in search of old varieties.

Maryland Dairy Goat Association Hosts Workshop

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md. — The Maryland Dairy Goat Association (MDGA) conducted its Spring Workshop and Conference at the Howard County Fairgrounds in West Friendship, Md. April 29.

The featured speakers included Dr. George Haenlien, professor of animal and dairy sciences at the University of Delaware; Todd Biddle, dairy goat judge and animal instructor at the Milton Hershey School in Hershey; and Paul Kempe, feed nutrition specialist with Blue Seal Feeds. Forty people were in attendance from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Virginia.

Dr. Haenlein gave a slide presentation and spoke of various dairy goat management practices throughout the world that he has encountered in his many travels. He encouraged dairy goat producers to promote their product to a greater level, and look for opportunities to display dairy goat products, such as the National Cheese Competition in Washington, D.C., in August.

Two sessions were presented by Biddle. The first was on understanding how the USDA Sire Summary works and how to put it to use in your breeding program. In the afternoon session, he demonstrated making glycerin-based soap with goat's milk.

Kempe explained nutrition requirements for high producing does. He described a high producing doe as one that milks 10 percent or greater of its body weight each day. Quality feed is important, and Kempe explained some of the feeds that Blue Seal manufacturers that work very well with dairy goats.

Jennifer Linton, right, was crowned the 2002 Maryland Dairy Goat Association's youth representative at is spring conference and workshop. On the left is Laura Forsythe, the 2002 alternate youth representative.

The MDGA also crowned its youth representative and alternate youth representative for 2002. The winner of the youth representative title was Jennifer Linton, 16, of Port Deposit, Md. Jennifer has been raising dairy goats for the last three years and is very excited about promoting all of their many aspects and products. She has competed in many public speaking and visual presentations.

One of Jennifer's most recent accomplishments was becoming captain of the Dairy Bowl Quiz team for the Cecil County 4-H last year.

Although dairy cows are the main focus of this competition, dairy goats are becoming more prominent due to their increasing popularity. Her knowledge of dairy goats as the only dairy goat breeder on the team helped Cecil County earn the ranking of reserve champion for the state of Maryland.

Jennifer went on to become the captain of the Maryland State Dairy Bowl Team, which competed at the North American International Livestock Exposition in Louisville, Ky. Again, Jennifer was the only dairy goat breeder competing, and her team placed fifth in the country. As a result of her dedication, many people developed a greater respect for the dairy goat, and a few even began to raise goats on the side.

The alternate youth representative was Laura Forsythe, 13, from Williamsport, Md. She has also been raising dairy goats for three years and has a lot of enthusiasm about promoting them.

Laura hosts various activities at her farm for local schools to come and see the goats, as well as taking her own goats to a company picnic to answer questions and demonstrate how personable goats are. She is a member of the Washington County 4-H Dairy Goat Club.

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP

2 pounds asparagus (washed, trimmed, cut into 2-inch chunks)
1 cup chicken broth (bouillon)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons heaping tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
1 cup heavy cream
1½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Simmer asparagus covered in chicken broth until very tender. Note: to garnish soup with a few tips, remove 10-12 when crisp but tender and reserve.

Put asparagus in food processor or blender with the liquid and puree. Melt butter in saucepan over medium heat, blend in flour with wire whisk. Add milk slowly, stirring until smooth. Mix in puree and cream. Heat, stirring occasionally until hot but not boiling. Do not boil! Add salt and pepper to taste. Ladle into bowls. If you wish, garnish with asparagus tips. Enjoy!

My name is Kathy and I'm a first-time entry fan. I've skimmed through Section B for years and have gotten many great recipes. Your picture of the many Holsteins caught my eye. At the time I was making soup and thought, "Hey, why not?"

My husband Richard and I are lucky enough to have a 180-acre farm. It is simply our little piece of Paradise. We milk approximately 40 cows from 1985-1998. With rising health insurance costs, I got a job off the farm. Three years later with drought, low milk prices, and rising costs, my husband sold the last of the cows in March 1998. What a hard decision. He also has gotten a full-time job and farms the land at night and weekends. I'm not complaining, I'm thankful for the time we had and look forward to spending more time with Richard and not working at the same time. Ha!

As an ex-dairy farmer, I'm still pushing milk to everyone I know. (Good for business). Most of my recipes have dairy products in them.

I have a nice size asparagus patch, so I make many dishes with asparagus. We love it.

My husband Ephraim and I had dairy farmed in the area for 40 years. In the meantime I also worked at Pepperidge Farms for 10½ years. Now we are supposed to be semi-retired. We now have a log home in the same area. We operate the Log House Bed and Breakfast.

These are very good hash browns. I always add ham and peas with mine. It's very well accepted for a breakfast meal with my guests.

These individual ham and cheese casseroles are a unique way to serve brunch, and they are easy to make too. This can also be put into a 9-inch square casserole instead of individual cups.

It is so good you will want to make it often. My daughter shared this recipe the first time I tasted it and it is now a family favorite.

Dairy Surplus Provides HIV/AIDS Relief

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — Land O'Lakes, Inc. added its support to an amendment by U.S. Sen. Paul Wellstone (D-MN) and amended by U.S. Sen. Herb Kohl (D-WI), that would provide 100,000 metric tons of nonfat dry milk to help international relief efforts in the fight to combat HIV/AIDS.

The "Dairy Surplus for HIV/AIDS Relief Amendment" was accepted into the Manager's Package of the Supplemental Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2002, H.R. 4775, and would authorize worldwide direct feeding programs to primarily mothers and children living with HIV/AIDS in communities heavily affected by the disease.

"Dairy products provide an economical and efficient way to bolster nutrition levels and extend lives," said Steven Krikava, director of government affairs for Land O'Lakes. "With more than 40 million people — more than half under the age of 15 — living with this disease, this is an exceptional, humanitarian way to utilize America's 450,000 metric tons of stored nonfat dry milk. This is a win-win proposition, with safeguards in place to prevent any adverse impact on the local dairy industry."

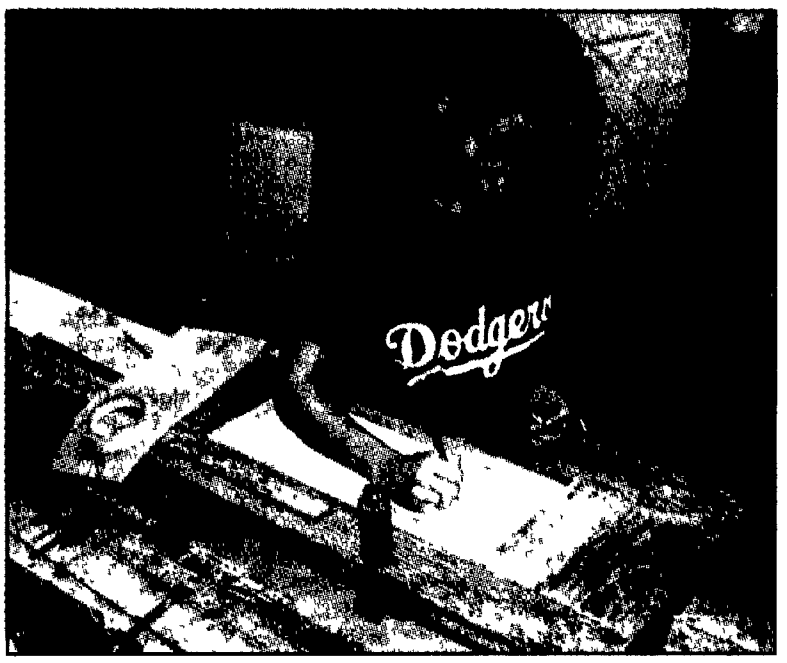
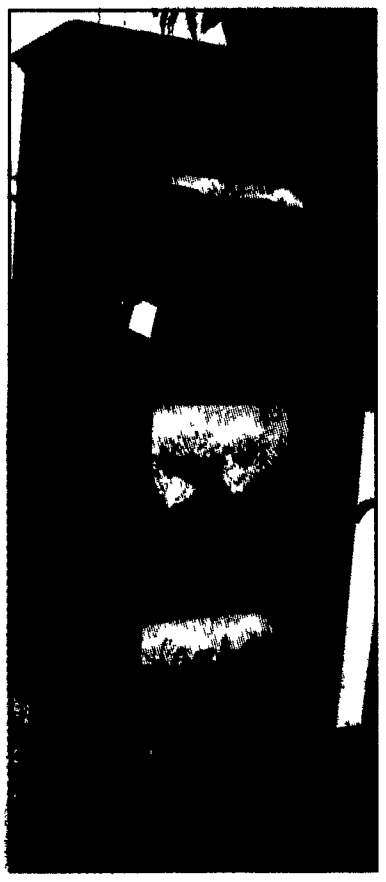
Mother, Daughter Transform Architectural 'Junque' Into International Home Furnishing Sales



Store visitors often catch Melissa Nordhoff painting her signature designs on shutters, doors, and aged woods.



Antique hardware and hand-rubbed finishes add a extraordinary flavor to the furniture.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Nancy Carson and daughter Melissa Nordhoff transform less-than-perfect antiques into furniture and accessories sought by clients worldwide.

The business evolved 16 years ago when Carson operated an antique shop in nearby Blue Ball. When a truckload of shutters was delivered to her business, her husband was skeptical that she would ever get rid of all those.

Carson was nonplussed. Her artist's eye saw potential. She painted a design on the shutter and placed it for sale.

Since then, hundreds of shutters painted with Carson's signature designs have been purchased for wholesale and retail purposes.

Carson's artistic talent is not limited to shutters. She uses aged spindles, tin ceiling tiles, old hardware, and endless architectural "junque" to create cupboards, entertainment centers, vanities, and her line of furniture and accessories.

Demand for her projects became so overwhelming that Carson stuck a paintbrush in her daughter's hand and said, "Paint this. You can do it."

Nordhoff could and did. Today, both daughter and mother have several lines of furniture, which they sell at their two shops, Carson's Country Stew and Cornfields, which sit side by side along Rt. 322 and Grist Mill Road., between Blue Ball and Ephrata. They also sell internationally through trade shows and catalogs.

Stacks of shutters, old doors and windows are propped agains the exterior of Carson's Country Stew. The look is deceiving.

Passers-by often surmise that the place is a salvage store. When they walk inside, visitors are surprised by the extensive collection of unique furniture and accessories such as a bed headboard made from an old fence or a dressing table fashioned from gingerbread trim, old mirror, window frame, and door.

"People say, 'You're a big secret. We never dreamed what was inside here," Nordhoff said of clients' exclamations of their first impressions.

The adjacent store, Cornfields (named because of the surrounding corn fields) is a ranch house turned into a garden and gift store. Each room follows a theme. Included is a garden room, country kitchen, shabby chic room, lighthouse-seashore decor, Dutch plantation, and a lodge style.

Mother and daughter each sticks to her own individual designs. For example, Nordhoff paints florals, fish, and roosters. Her mom paints herbs and every other kind of animal, bird, or made-to-order projects.

"It's so much fun to be able to paint something that a client loves." Nordhoff said. "It's also wonderful to see our pieces in unexpected places when we travel."

Amazingly the mother and daughter duo do not hide their painting secrets. They teach and sell supplies for their painting techniques to visitors.

"It happens," Nordhoff said of people imitating their designs and selling them at competing markets.

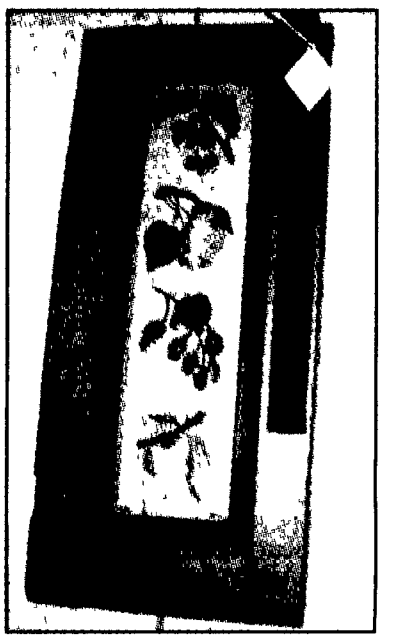
"But it often works in our favor, also. People realize how time consuming projects are to finish and are more inclined to buy finished products."

Their most frustrating experiences are having people copy their tradeshow catalog pieces and assigning work to third-world countries and them importing the finished pieces.

"We can't compete with the labor prices of other countries," Nordhoff said. "But when the pieces are side by side, clients can see the differences and are willing to pay higher prices for American-made pieces. Ours are actually made from antiques and are better quality. Ours are one-of-a-kind pieces. We are constantly coming up with new designs. Everything we do is hand made. We do not use spray paints or assembly-line methods."

The lines of furniture include:

- Furniture fashioned from rough sawn wood and embellished with antique latches and other hardware.
- Furniture fashioned from new wood made to look old.
- Furniture fashioned from bits and pieces of old architecture such as balasters, lintels, fenceposts, and knobs.



Painted shutters such as these may be used as end tables, wall hangings, or as cupboard doors.

The furniture is available in three styles that Nordhoff defines as lodge, rooster, and shabby chic.

Eight employees work inside the store. Nordhoff and her mom do the painting and designs. Melissa's husband Greg refinishes the furniture. Carson's husband Ken delivers furniture. In addition, 10 retired men act as "pickers."

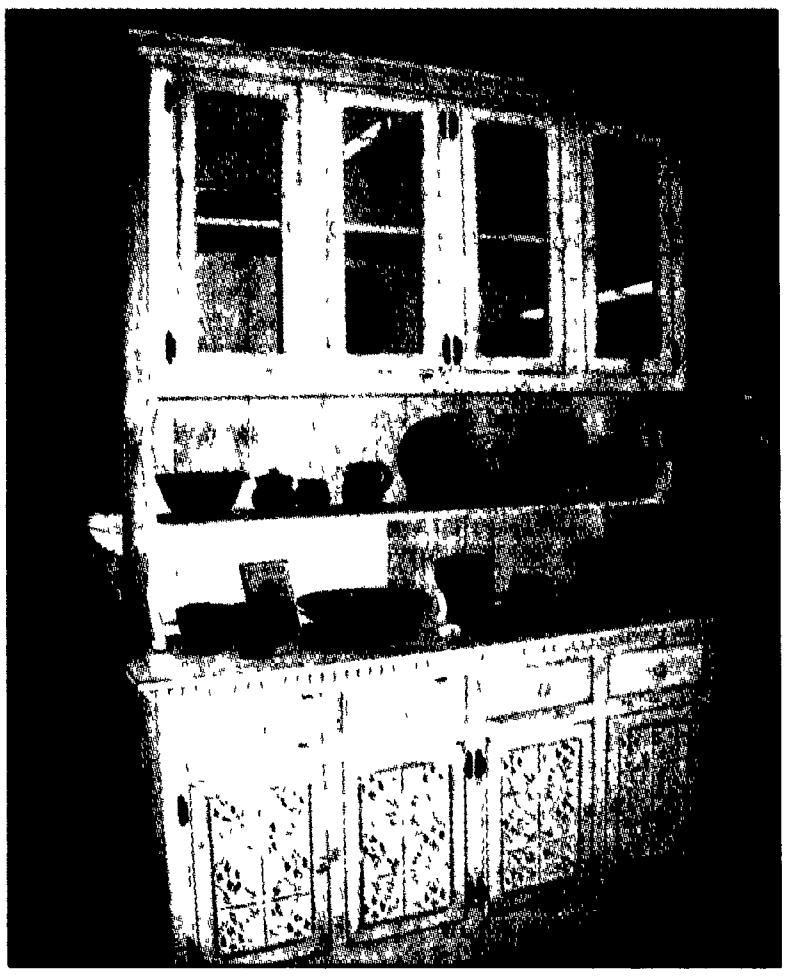
"They know what we need and the prices to pay to find what we want," Nordhoff said.

The popularity of shabby chic and rustic styles has spread internationally and is reflected in the prices old architecture demands at auctions.

"We are no longer able to purchase old shutters and pieces at give-away prices," Nordhoff said.

The two shops, Carson's Country Stew and Cornfields, sit side by side along Rt. 322 and Grist Mill Road, between Blue Ball and Ephrata. For more details, call (717) 354-7343 or (717) 354-2628.

Rustic looks and painted florals attract a wide array of customers.



Clay pottery and other accessories accent the hand-crafted pieces.

Instead of a factory-made entertainment center, customers can select one-of-a-kind designed by Nancy Carson and her daughter Melissa Nordhoff.

Some Porcelains Not Necessarily Ming

You'd be surprised at the number of letters I get from readers who believe they have a valuable piece of Ming porcelain — usually blue and white. Or, they claim their Ming has carmine or rose color motifs, that it was inherited and came with a handwritten letter saying, "This is a valuable piece of Ming china."

Or they write, "I bought this piece at an auction outside Las Vegas." As I have learned over the years when it comes to authentic Ming porcelain (1400-1600), anything is possible. For example the finest pieces of Imperial Ming porcelains can fetch several million dollars at auction as can Ming styles.

On the other hand, there are small pieces of the Ming period that are not top quality and had utilitarian useage. Depending where you buy them, they can cost from several hundred to a few thousand.

I first came in contact with Ming porcelain in a Wilmette, Illinois garage in the 1970s.

The porcelain was a small, blue and white, covered ink box. Gathering dust on a shelf it was priced at $5.

I was skeptical of my discovery and showed it to an appraiser who specialized in Chinese porcelains. Yes, it was Ming period, but only worth about $150, being of utilitarian value.

A "twin" is in the Art Institute of Chicago oriental collection.

CLUES: Color is a clue. While blue and white is most often associated with Ming, the other colors, green, turquoise, yellow, aubergine, and tomato red enamels were also used.

Rose was not used until after the Ming period.

What if the piece is blue and white, has Ming reign marks and motifs?

That does not mean that it is Ming. The Japanese copied and exported "Ming type" porcelain, complete with reign marks. One way to tell the difference is when human figures were used. Chinese figures were in dignified poses where the Japanese portrayed people in a more relaxed, happy way. Identification requires hands on expertise by a specialist.

The most popular motifs of Ming porcelains inclued elaborate scrolls and flowers, dragons, peacocks, birds and human figures. Decorations in the Ming style continued into the 18th century. Quality examples came to a Christie's auction last year selling for several million dollars.

Imperial Ming table porcelain appeared in the market place after 1920. Before that, pieces made in provincial factories during the period were collected in Europe. Hundreds of pieces of Imperial ware were made for the emperor and his court.

Since Ming was the first Oriental porcelain introduced in Europe during the 17th and 18th centuries, it was most familiar. Literally thousands of pieces were imported not only from China but Japan. Since the Ming style was popular, copies were made during the following centuries.

So, much of what is labeled "Ming" these days, may have been made centuries later.

A friend who is an authority on Ming porcelain recently returned from a trip to Beijing, China, hoping to find authentic Ming for his extensive collection.

As he tells it the fakers are busy turning it out, along with 18th century pieces. He confessed that even with his experts' eye it was not easy telling if some of the pieces were new.

Some were so authentic looking that even museums and auction houses have been having problems identifying it for years.

The best advice is to realize if the price is too low for a piece, it is probably a fake or a Japanese version.

Genetic Solutions, Luminex Corporation Announce Partnership

BRISBANE, Australia, and AUSTIN, Texas — Genetic Solutions Pty Ltd and Luminex Corporation (Nasdaq: LMNX) announced that they have entered into a multiyear strategic partnership to commercialize a new line of testing kits designed specifically for the cattle industry based on Luminex's proprietary xMAP (TM) technology.

Genetic Solutions will develop, manufacture, and market its GeneSTAR(R) line of DNA tests for use with the Luminex 100(TM) system.

Under the terms of the parties' agreement, Genetic Solutions has worldwide nonexclusive rights to develop and distribute reagent kits based on Luminex's proprietary xMAP technology, including microsphere beads and the Luminex 100 system. For these rights, Luminex will receive royalties from the commercialization of Genetic Solutions's products based on Luminex's technology, as well as revenue from the sale of instruments and beads.

Dr. Jay Hetzel, scientific director at Genetic Solutions, said, "The Luminex technology will enable us to increase the throughput of our current DNA diagnostic tests. Importantly, it will also provide a platform for the development of multigene and multitrait tests in the near future."

"We are pleased to announce our first strategic partner focused on producing tests for animal product quality and health within the cattle industry," stated Luminex's Executive Vice President Gail Page. "The announcement of this partnership demonstrates the flexibility of the Luminex platform to add value outside of the traditional clinical diagnostic testing market and research life sciences."

Luminex's open platform xMAP system is a proprietary technology that performs up to 100 assays simultaneously on a single drop of fluid with the capability for both medium- and high-throughout assay applications. xMAP combines the use of low-cost microsphere-based assays with small lasers, advanced digital signal processors and proprietary software to offer greater speed, precision and flexibility over current bioassay technologies.

Genetic Solutions is a privately held company which provides leading edge genetic information technology to the livestock and aquaculture industries in Australia and globally. Products currently include SureTRAK(R), a DNA-based system for validation of beef supply chain tracking systems and GeneSTAR(R) marbling, a DNA diagnostic test for carcass quality. More information on Genetic Solutions can be obtained on the Internet at http://www.geneticsolutions.com.au.

U.S. Announces Plans To Conduct International Technology Conference

ROME — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman announced that the USDA will host a ministerial-level International Conference on Agricultural Science and Technology early next year, inviting ministers from around the world to attend.

"Everyone benefits as more countries understand and share the benefits of scientific and technological innovation in agriculture," Veneman said. "This conference will focus on the needs of developing countries in adopting new technologies and the role of partnerships in improving access to technologies."

Speaking in Rome before heads of state and other officials from more than 180 nations at the World Food Summit: Five Years Later, Veneman reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to ending global hunger and poverty, noting that increased agricultural productivity would be one major step toward greater food availability and access in poor countries.

"Achieving needed gains in global agricultural productivity and better food distribution will require broader dissemination, adoption, and acceptance of existing and new technologies," Veneman said. "Technology is part of the solution to global food security. We want to encourag countries to work together to take advantage of the opportunities it presents."

Biotechnology and other agricultural production, processing and information technologies have the potential to significantly boost farm yields, cut food waste, encourage environmentally sustainable production and offer new marketing opportunities for farmers.

The conference agenda will cover access to technologies, new scientific research, the relationship between regulatory practices and innovation, and the creation of partnerships to help developing countries adopt new technologies to increase agricultural productivity

The dates and location for the conference have not yet been determined. Sites outside the United States, particularly in developing countries, are being considered.

For more information about U.S. participation at the World Food Summit, including press releases, transcripts and policy papers, visit www usda.gov.

Agricultural Center Receives Support From MidAtlantic Farm Credit

WESTMINSTER, Md. — MidAtlantic Farm Credit of Hagerstown, Md., recently contributed $2,500 to the Washington County Agricultural Education Center. This latest donation brings MidAtlantic's total support of the center to $10,000 in recent years.

This $2,500 was part of the Ag Ed Center's $75,000 Matching Fund drive, conducted from June 1, 2000 to June 1, 2002, and dedicated to the development of the Rural Living History Area.

The Rural Living History Area will include a bank barn and demonstration buildings, such as a smokehouse, blacksmith shop and a wash house.

"Farm Credit is pleased to contribute to the local agricultural heritage of a community," said MidAtlantic president Bob Frazee. "The success of present agriculture lies in the education of our communities, and the Washington County Ag Education Center has done a wonderful job supporting that mission."

The Washington County Agricultural Education Center hopes to open the Rural Living History Area throughout 2003.

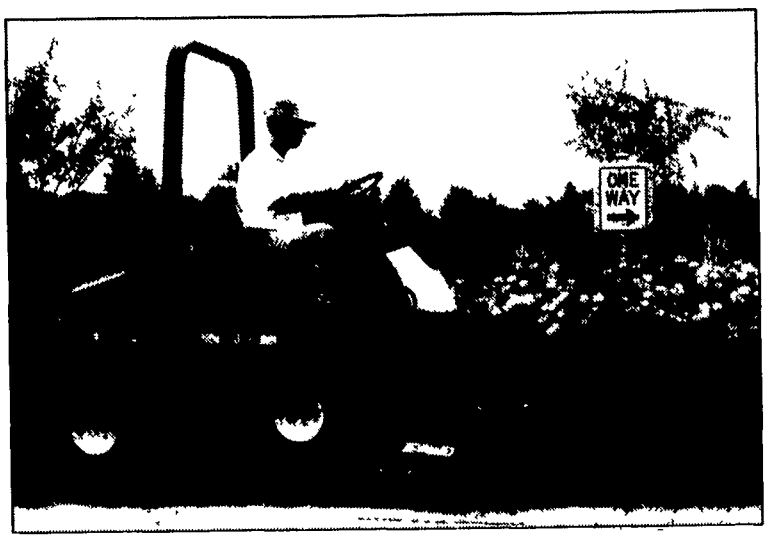
Massey Ferguson Introduces Front Cut Mower

ATLANTA, Ga. — The new MF FC23 and MF FC33 bring a new level of serviceability and dependability to the commercial front cut mower market.

Thanks to their rugged construction, these professional grade mowers are designed to last. Whether cutting the green for a golf course, a municipality or a lawn service client, they'll do the job right. At the same time, the design of the new mowers pays special attention to ease of operation, with a mower deck that can be serviced at 90 degrees.

"Front cut mower operators are on their machines for hours at a time," says Steven Barcuch, marketing manager, Massey Ferguson. "They need serviceability, dependability and comfortability. Our mowers give them all three."

The engine hood tilts for easy servicing, but it is in the 90-degree mower deck tilt that is really grabbing attention in the marketplace. Operators know that the one area they have to access the most is the mower deck. Being able to easily raise it to a right angle for servicing gives them unparalleled access and added safety, too. With the FC23 and FC33, it isn't necessary to crawl under the deck to take care of a plug or remove foreign material.



The FC23 and FC33 front cut mowers have been designed to deliver 4WD performance with hefty 60-inch or 72-inch mower decks.

Heavy-duty structural supports throughout the frame design also exceed industry standards. The more rugged frame is designed to handle even the roughest ground. When it comes to dependability, these new four-wheel drive models will stand their ground under the hood as well. The FC23 has a 22.9 hp engine with a single range hydrostatic transmission, independent PTO and an 8.2 gallon fuel tank. Including the mower deck, the unit has a total length of 116.1 inches, and a width of 44.5 inches with a 60-inch mower swath. The side discharge mower has a top speed of 8.4 mph in forward gear and 4.0 mph in reverse.

Indiana Farm Bureau Insurance To Acquire Agway Insurance

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Indiana Farm Bureau Insurance Companies announced it has reached a definitive agreement with Agway, Inc. to acquire 100 percent of the stock of New York-based Agway Insurance Company, in a deal valued at $21 million.

The transaction is expected to close before the end of the year, subject to New York Insurance Department approval. Agway Insurance Company is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Agway, Inc.

"We are extremely excited at this opportunity to grow our family of insurance companies and to expand our presence to farmers and other customers outside the state of Indiana," said Farm Bureau President Don Villwock. "The similarities in corporate mission, values, product lines, and management style between our two organizations make this a great fit."

Agway CEO Don Cardarelli commented, "We are very pleased that this transaction will allow Agway Insurance Company to become part of a well-respected organization that is committed to both the insurance industry as well as to farm and rural customers. It also captures immediate value for our cooperative."

As part of the Indiana Farm Bureau Insurance Group, Agway Insurance Company is expected to remain a separate entity headquartered in DeWitt, N.Y., with plans to maintain the vast majority of the current Agway Insurance employee base.

Agway Insurance Company is a New York property and casualty insurance company that offers farm and personal lines insurance products through more than 300 independent agencies in 10 states throughout rural New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Virginia.

Indiana Farm Bureau Insurance writes primarily auto, home, farm, and commercial property casualty coverage and offers life and annuity products to clients in the state of Indiana through its network of 465 independent agents.

Polaris Offers New Sportsman 700 ATV

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — This year, the new Polaris Sportsman 700 Twin might just prove to be the best hired help a farmer can find. For working on the back forty, or moving equipment around the homestead, the Sportsman 700 Twin is the most powerful, smoothest riding ATV for any job.

Polaris designed its latest automatic transmission all-terrain vehicle (ATV) with farmers and ranchers in mind. The most powerful four-wheeler on the market, the Sportsman 700 Twin was named ATV Magazine's ATV of the Year for 2002. It is capable of performing the toughest work for an extended period of time. For fence work, assorted fieldwork, transporting equipment or just quickly and efficiently getting from here to there, the Sportsman 700 Twin is the best all-terrain vehicle on the market.

With 20 percent more horsepower than the Sportsman 500 H.O., and an industry-leading towing capacity of 1,500 pounds, the Sportsman 700 Twin can handle most any farm chore. Its 683cc liquid-cooled, four-valve, four-stroke engine is the biggest power plant ever lowered in an ATV, making it a powerful tool for any number of tasks — from hauling feed to clearing brush, surveying fields to moving hay.

The Sportsman 700 Twin runs on tough, durable 25-inch Polaris-exclusive Goodyear Rawhide tires with deep lugs and sidewalls for outstanding traction on any terrain. It also comes standard with a speedometer, odometer, hourometer, high- and low-beam headlights, temperature lights, front and rear racks, electric start, and new in-line shifting for high- and low-gears, reverse and park.

An extensive line of Pure Polaris accessories is another reason the Sportsman 700 Twin makes an ideal farming companion. Sprayers, disc attachments, diggers, levelers, cultivators and GPS units can save valuable time and make a long day in the field a little easier.

BETHEL (Berks Co.) — Eleven years ago changes began taking place in the pastures of Papa Farm.

When Brian Mohn began his pasture based program it was hard to find information on rotational grazing, he said. I read Lancaster Farming articles and got ideas that migrated from Lancaster.

Mohn along with his wife Karen and daughters Beverly 12 Carolyn 10 and Judy 8 have managed the farm for 11 years as a Philadelphia dairy farm.

Brian Mohn, manager of Papa Farm, moves the fences each day on the farm's rotational grazing system for the 60 Angus cows and their calves

Mohn's operation is unique because it is one of very few pasture based farms in the area. He said he wanted to get the most out of this modern way of production.

A lot of it was social and economically the Berks County scene helped to his education by conducting pasture walks and grazer discussions that helped to educate Mohn.

In the initial days I traveled to Lancaster for pasture information to learn about water quality projects he said. Besides adding stream bank fencing Mohn has put in his own concrete stream crossings.

Now to get a profitable operation I don't see any other way you can be in the cow/calf business without being in the grazing business he said because of smaller framed animals with improved genetics and carefully maintained pastures that the animals do not have to be fed supplemental hay or grain for the most part the operation's costs have declined.

Pennsylvania Spokesman

A year ago Mohn went to American Forage and Grassland Council's conference in Springdale Arkansas as Pennsylvania's spokesman. Every spokesperson gave a 12 minute presentation on what forages mean to them.

The main audience is university researchers USDA pasture management people scientists and extension agents he said. We were given the opportunity to teach the teachers. They wanted more information to take back to educate others.

There were people from all over the country competing there were very diverse speeches from graziers hay producers and dairy producers.

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Richard Hann knows the history and workings of the Pennsylvania Forage & Grassland Council.

For 34 years Hann has been a vital part in the organization handling the finances and acting as chief coordinator of events board meetings and membership matters. He has served as secretary treasurer since 1968. In addition to those responsibilities he assumed a new executive director post in 2000.

Hann recently reflected on PFGC's history along with changes in agriculture and forage management that have occurred through the years.

PFGC formed in 1960 as the Pennsylvania Grassland Council (PGC) the organization became affiliated with American Grassland Council in 1963. The name was changed to Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council in 1974 to more fully recognize its role in the state's forage research and

Cargill Signs Exclusive Agreement To Develop, Implement Genome For Top-Quality Cattle

SAVAGE, Md. — Bringing scientific precision to the prediction of beef quality, MetaMorphix, Inc. recently announced an exclusive agreement with Caprock Cattle Feeders and Excel Corporation, both part of Cargill, Inc., to develop and implement genomic selection tools that allow cattle breeders and feedlot operators to meet consumer demands for consistency and tenderness.

MetaMorphix, a privately held life sciences company dedicated to discovering and commercializing technologies that naturally improve the food supply and human health, anticipates spending more than $100 million during the next few years to develop a major genomic franchise in the livestock industry.

For this initial project, Caprock and Excel will provide $10 million to MetaMorphix to support the development of innovative selection products for cattle. The tools are possible only through the use of the newly sequenced cattle genome and its SNP (single nucleotide polymorphism) maps announced June 11 by MetaMorphix and Celera Genomics.

MetaMorphix holds rights to Celera's cattle genome and map of approximately 600,000 SNPs. The sequencing of this genome and its dense map promises to produce precise selection and breeding methods in the cattle and dairy industries.

MetaMorphix's wholly owned subsidiary, MMI Genomics Inc., formed from the purchase of Celera's livestock and animal genotyping business, is specifically designed to host such animal production initiatives.

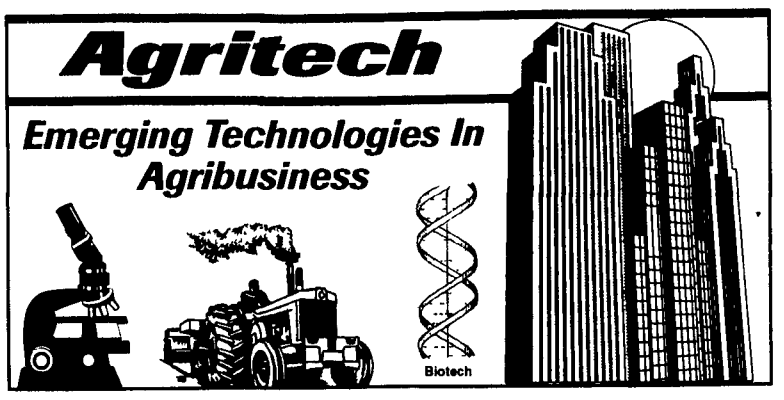
"We are excited to be part of this groundbreaking step forward for consumers and the beef industry," said Dr. Ed Quattlebaum, president, CEO and chairman of MetaMorphix.

"As pioneers in animal genomics, we are happy to demonstrate how this unique technology ultimately could be applied for consumer benefit," Quattlebaum said.

"The beef industry has made great strides over the last decade in identifying consumer desires and sharing that information within the industry. This tool will take that information to a new level, providing a road map for the quality and consistency of individual animals," said Zay Gilbreath, president of Caprock Cattle Feeders.

"The resulting information will help ranchers, feedlot operators, and other cattle producers make more accurate business decisions," Gilbreath said. "The ultimate goal is to meet or exceed consumer expectations."

Bill Buckner, president of Excel, said, "This project is all about improving the overall quality of beef for consumers. As a beef processor, we will have a better idea of cattle quality coming into the plant so that we can direct them to the right product lines. Consumers want consistency and tenderness, and this project will be a huge leap forward in the beef industry's ongoing efforts to provide that."



Salmonella Microwell Test Receives Validation

LANSING, Mich. — Neogen's Gene-Trak Salmonella Microwell Test has received Performance Tested Method status from the Association of Official Analytical Chemists International Research Institute (AOAC-RI).

The AOAC-RI conferred its Performance Tested Method Status No. 030201 on Gene-Trak® Salmonella Microwell Test after its independent performance review. Gene-Trak Salmonella Microwell Test combines the superior specificity of DNA hybridization technology with the ability to rapidly process up to 93 samples at one time.

The test is also adaptable to automation, further shortening the hands-on time needed to process numerous samples.

This Gene-Trak test provides superior results with no more equipment or training than is required for the widely used, but less specific antibody-based microwell ELISA kits.

"The trend toward fewer, bigger food producers requires us to offer testing products that reflect their changing needs. The format of this kit is ideal for customers who require a high volume of sample throughput when testing for bacteria," said James Herbert, Neogen's president. "The AOAC-RI validation will allow us to build upon our success with the test kit by allowing us access to select laboratories and institutions that prefer AOAC-RI validations. Each time we receive a third party validation on any of our tests, it provides further assurance to our many customers."

A major advantage of Gene-Trak's DNA hybridization technology is its highly-specific probes, which virtually eliminate false negatives and greatly minimize the chance of receiving false positive results due to cross-reactivity with closely-related organisms. Eliminating needless confirmation effort, and cost, helps streamline a company's safety and quality processes.

This DNA hybridization test employs Salmonella-specific DNA probes directly labeled with horseradish peroxidase and a colorimetric end-point to detect as little as 1 Salmonella CFU in a 25 g food sample when the specified enrichment protocols are used.

A sample is considered negative for the presence of Salmonella spp. if the absorbance value (A_{450}) obtained is less than 0.10. A sample is considered positive for the presence of Salmonella spp. if the absorbance value obtained is greater than or equal to 0.10. Positive samples should be confirmed by standard culture procedures, followed by biochemical and serological identification.

We put the auger up front where you can see it control it Over 12 ft unloading height
Hydraulic fold, self-aligning augers and over-center locks
3-minute unloading with vertical and horizontal augers You unload at full capacity, wet or dry, from start to finish Less grain damage because augers run full Much more efficient than single auger carts

Landec Corporation Achieves Record Quarter Net Income

MENLO PARK, Calif. — Landec Corporation (Nasdaq: LNDC), a developer and marketer of technology-based polymer products for food, agricultural, and licensed partner applications, reported record quarterly net income and earnings per share results for the second quarter ended April 28, 2002 and reported net income for the first six months of fiscal year 2002.

Total revenues for the quarter were $57.1 million versus $59.8 million in the prior year second quarter of fiscal 2001. Landec reported net income applicable to common shareholders of $5.3 million, or $0.24 per diluted share, compared with net income of $3.2 million, or $0.15 per diluted share, for the year ago quarter.

Revenues for the first six months of fiscal 2002 were $97.5 million versus revenues of $104.5 million a year ago. The company reported net income applicable to common shareholders of $1.7 million or $0.08 per diluted share for the first six months of fiscal 2002 compared to a loss of $757,000 or $0.05 per share, in the first six months of fiscal 2001.

EBITDA — earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization — for the second quarter were $6.5 million versus $5.3 million in the second quarter of last year. For the six-month period, EBITDA were $4.3 million versus $3.2 million for the same period last year.

The results for the second quarter and for the first six months of fiscal 2002 include the impact of the change in accounting for the amortization of intangibles. Intangibles deemed to have an indefinite life are no longer amortized. The implementation of this change increased second quarter net income by approximately $640,000, or $0.03 per diluted share and net income for the first six months by approximately $1.3 million, or $0.06 per diluted share.

"Our second quarter results reflect record net income levels for the company as we continue to experience seasonal patterns in our revenues and profits, with the second quarter historically showing the highest revenue and profit results," said Gary Steele, president and CEO of Landec. "Despite a weak year for the corn seed industry and industry-wide produce sourcing problems early in the quarter, Landec's second quarter net income increased $2.1 million or over 67 percent compared to the year ago quarter, and by $8.9 million over the prior quarter.

The initiatives implemented in fiscal year 2001 are starting to be reflected in the bottom line results. Revenues are down for the quarter and 7 percent for the first six months as compared to the same periods last year because of the company's decision to downsize its "fee-for-service" commodity produce business.

However, gross margins as a percent of sales increased to 24 percent in the second quarter of fiscal year 2002 from 19 percent in last year's second quarter and for the six months gross margins have increased to 19 percent this year from 15 percent last year."

Landec Ag, the company's Intellicoat(R) seed coating subsidiary, has expanded its field trials and commercial sales during fiscal year 2002 for its new Early Plant (TM) hybrid corn and Relay (TM) Intercropping of wheat and coated soybean. The new products join the existing line-up of Fielder's Choice Direct(R) hybrid corn and Intellicoat coated Pollinator Plus (TM) seed corn coatings.

Pollinator Plus seed coatings are applied to inbred seed corn to delay seed germination and extend the pollination window thus reducing risks and increasing yields for seed companies. Pollinator Plus is already being used by 30 major seed companies in the production of hybrid seed corn. Seed companies are rapidly increasing their use of this technology, and this product line has been planted on over 60,000 acres in 2002 versus 20,000 acres in 2001.

Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.

Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo® has a 12" wide gooseneck. Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage. It is especially helpful in larger silos

The BlueMax® is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit All parts of the BlueMax© subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy. For strength, there are reinforcements all around Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier

The Ultimate G-100 Process
"The Best"

1. Valspar 10S Fin
2. Epo
3. Zinc Phosphate P
4. G-100 Zinc Coating
5. Full Hard Steel (~~80,000 min. yield~~)
6. Heat formed less paint cracks
7. Everlast II

NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention
2 Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion
3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider
4 G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels
5 Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc
6 Heat formed Metal is painted before ribs are formed Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)
7 Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F
8 Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square $1 69 Per L F

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Attention: Swine and Poultry Producers

Announcing:

Crude Soy Oil Now Available

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations.

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:

- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
- Can be used for dust control purposes.
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:

- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat.
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills.
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:

- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program

- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products
